Ex-Gov. Kohler Is Found Dead; Funeral to be Held Wednesday

Kohler—(P)—Death has concluded the typically American life story of Walter J. Kohler, industrialist, philanthropist and political leader.

The son of an Austrian immigrant who founded an enamelware and farm equipment plant, he started as a $1.25-a-day laborer in his father's shop and rose to the position of millionaire plumbing manufacturer and a term as governor of Wisconsin.

He was found dead yesterday by his wife in his room at Riverbend, his country estate at the foot of the hill upon which he built the model village of Kohler.

Mr. Kohler, chairman of the board of the Kohler Company, was 65 years old. Dr. Wesley Van Zanten, Sheboygan county coroner, said death was due to coronary embolism.

Funeral services will be conducted at Riverbend at 3 p. m. Wednesday.

Headed Relief Drive

The former governor, who had appeared to be in excellent health, recently had served as Wisconsin chairman of the Finnish relief fund.

Although Mr. Kohler's formal education was limited to the public schools of Sheboygan, Wis., where he was born March 3, 1875, he was an avid reader and became known as a connoisseur of painting. His wife, the former Charlotte Schroeder of Kenosha, Wis., formerly was an art teacher.

Later in life he received the honorary degrees of master of arts from the University of Wisconsin and doctor of laws from Lake Forest (Ill.) college.

He was an aviation enthusiast and one of the first industrial leaders to adopt the airplane as a regular mode of travel.

Built Kohler Village

He became head of the Kohler Company at the age of 30 shortly after the original plant just outside Sheboygan was destroyed by fire. A new factory was erected here, and the village of Kohler began to take form, embodying his philosophy of bettered living conditions for workmen.

Mr. Kohler, a Republican, was elected governor in 1928. He was accused of having violated the corrupt practices act by excessive campaign expenditures, but was acquitted by a unanimous jury verdict.

He lost the Republican nomination in 1930 to Philip F. LaFollette. He was renominated over LaFollette in 1932 but was defeated in the general election by Democrat Albert G. Schroeder.

Friends recently had urged Mr. Kohler to run for the United States senate.

He was among 53 individuals indicted by a federal grand jury at

Charge WPA Cash Was Mishandled

Excessive Travel and Administrative Costs Are Alleged

Washington—(P)—In secret session, the house subcommittee handling the $975,000,000 WPA appropriation bill discussed with WPA chiefs today charges that some of the money previously given the relief agency was mishandled.

The charges, contained in a report made by J. O. O'Connor Roberts, committee counsel, have not been made public, but Chairman Woodrum (D-Va.) said that in general they alleged excessive travel expenses and administrative costs, WPA work done on private property and improper certifications of persons for WPA work.

The WPA officials appearing were General Eisenhower, F. C. Huntington and Colonel Brehon Somervell, administrator in New York city.

Woodrum predicted that the appropriation bill would not reach the house for three weeks more. Hearings will require at least two weeks more, he said, adding that a third week would be needed to prepare final drafts.

President Roosevelt has urged congressional leaders to push the measure to enactment as an aid to early adjustment. Leaders have tentatively set June 10 as the adjournment goal.

Labor Board Orders Oshkosh Company to Reinstate Seven Men

Washington—(P)—The national labor relations board today ordered the Leach company, Oshkosh, Wis., to reinstate with back pay seven employees found to have been discriminated against because of their union membership.

The board also directed the company to "cease discouraging" membership of its employees in CIO's United Auto Workers union.

Allegations that four other employees suffered discrimination were dismissed.

The seven ordered reinstated are: William Foust, Frank Cud, Henry Millard, Robert Millard, Eugene Hetzel, Leo C. Miller and William Beeson. Denied reinstatement are Clarence Fihart, Carl F. Dreyer, Earl E. Luker and Frank C. Closterman, Jr.

Charges against the Leach company were heard at Oshkosh in March, 1939. The union's charges were denied by Elbert C. Leach, company president, who testified that the men were discharged because of inefficiency and for reasons of economy. Leach also denied he had referred to the union as "a bunch of communists."

Labor Leader Faces Charges Of Collecting $100,000 in New York Extortion Racket

New York—(P)—George Sealise, 43, a stocky former convict, under-taker and powerful sub-chief of the American Federation of Labor, today answered criminal charges that he had collected $100,000 in a labor extortion racket with a statement that he was a "victim of political aspirations."

Detectives seized the $25,000-a-year president of the Building Service Employees International union in a pre-dawn raid Sunday at a midtown hotel.

They acted on instructions telephoned from San Francisco by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey who is campaigning for the Republican presidential nomination.

The sleepy-eyed, silk pajama-clad union leader of 70,000 scrubwomen, chambermaids, elevator operators, porters and window cleaners was permitted to dress. He was then hustled to a police station and booked on charges of extorting $100,000 in the last three years from 20 New York hotels and 11 window cleaning firms.

Sealise, who served 4½ years in Atlanta federal prison for white slavery in 1915 and since has been turned down twice in attempts to obtain a presidential pardon and restoration of civil rights, was fingerprinted and arraigned in general sessions court before Judge Jacob Gould Schurman, Jr.

He was released in $40,000 bail posted by his union after spending the day in Tombs prison. His secretary, Ann Kay, arrested Saturday as a material witness, was freed in $20,000 bail the union put up for her.

Assistant District Attorney Murray I. Gurfein said Sealise extorted money from hotels by threatening them with strikes, excessive wage increase demands and sabotage.

Gurfein named as co-conspirators with Sealise two other union officials—Lizzy Schwartz, eastern representative of the building service union, and his brother, Louis Schwartz, president of Local 32J.

Chicago—(P)—Trial of Terry Druggan, prohibition era beer operator, and four others in a conspiracy case was continued today pending examination of Druggan by a government physician.

Federal Judge John P. Barnes instructed Marshal William H. McDonnell to designate a physician to make the examination. Druggan underwent an operation for a gastric ulcer rupture last Friday in St. Joseph's hospital at Elgin, Ill.

His physician reported to the court today that Druggan would be unable to appear for two or three months. Druggan and the others were charged with conspiracy to make false statements as to ownership of the Gambin brewery in connection with an application for a permit to operate the plant.

Practical Pointers on How to Produce Perfect Meals Will Be Feature of Cooking School

BY VIOLA HELLERMANN

The ambition of every woman—to produce a perfect meal from savory soup to fragrant coffee, and still remain charming and unfrustrated—can be realized today with the efficient meal service which the average household possesses, says Miss Edna M. Ferguson, who will conduct the Post-Crescent's nineteenth annual cooking school from April 30 through May 3 at the Rio theater.

Homemakers who already own up-to-date equipment, as well as prospective investors, are certain to profit from Miss Ferguson's practical pointers, based on thorough study and personal use.

Four brisk programs beginning at 9 o'clock each morning, will unfold new recipes, fresh ideas and valuable step-by-step hints. There will be surprise gifts daily. Tempting dinner specials, watched in the making, also will be presented to members of the audience.

Each program will be different, including not only profitable advice in every day cooking problems, but sparkling entertainment as well, headed by Tom Temple's popular orchestra, playing in the manner of Orrin Tucker.

Miss Ferguson, who is new to the Post-Crescent cooking school, has untold household knots for thousands of women in many states. Gracious and sympathetic, she has built up an amazing storehouse of valuable suggestions for solving such fundamental home problems as laundry, budgeting, meal planning, table service and food preparation for invalids and finicky youngsters.

Cooking school talks from this alert manager will take up the proper combinations of foods that make a meal healthful and delightful. As she tosses off the busy program in her quick-and-span kitchen, Miss Ferguson will share her fund of knowledge on protective foods that maintain health, adding suggestions on planning a well-balanced diet.

Every woman in the audience will want to jot down the steady stream of tips and shortcuts that will feature each lively session.

Laws Curbing Picketing are Ruled Invalid

Court Decisions Affect Alabama and County
In California

LABOR GROUPS WIN Federation Is Victor in One Case and CIO In Other

Washington—(P)—Legislation regulating picketing in Alabama and Shasta county, California, was held unconstitutional today by the supreme court.

The Alabama statute, enacted in 1923, was challenged by the American Federation of Labor in behalf of Byron Thornhill.

The Shasta county ordinance, passed in 1938, was attacked by the CIO in behalf of John Carlson.

Justice Murphy, who delivered both opinions, said they limited freedom of discussion. Justice McReynolds dissented.

Counsel for the American Federation of Labor, representing Thornhill, had contended that the Alabama statute, as interpreted by the state supreme court, prohibited peaceful picketing and hence unconstitutionally infringed freedom of speech.

Denies Threats Made

Thornhill said that all he did was to ask another employee of the Brown Wood Preserving company, Inc., of Brownsville, Ala., not to resume his employment until a strike in progress had been settled.

There were no threats or show of force, he added.

Counsel for the CIO representing Carlson, contended the Shasta county ordinance prohibited peaceful picketing and hence unconstitutionally infringed freedom of speech.

Shasta county officials said Carlson was one of 28 CIO pickets carrying banners at the site of the Delta tunnel project, where there was a jurisdictional dispute between the CIO and the American Federation of Labor.

Carlson was said to have carried a banner on which was inscribed "This job unfair to CIO."

California Case

The Shasta county ordinance prohibited picketing in the vicinity of any place of business for the purpose of influencing persons to refrain from working there.

Carlson was sentenced to serve 12 days in jail or pay a $25-fine. His conviction was upheld by the California supreme court.

13 Go to Trial For Mail Fraud

Accused of Promising 400
Per Cent to Cemetery
Lot Investors

Chicago—(P)—Thirteen persons went on trial in federal court today on charges of mail fraud in connection with alleged promises of profits up to 400 per cent to investors in cemetery lots.

The government alleged the 13 and 5 other defendants swindled 500 investors in seven states of $200,000 during 1935.

The defendants were officers and agents of the First Commonwealth Trust Co., Chicago, which Prosecutor A. Bradley Eben said was set up to sell cemetery lots for investment purposes.

Eben said Christian W. Beck and Michael D. Gordon of Cleveland and Robert Stickney of Boston obtained control of the Crown Hill cemetery in Twinsburg, Ohio, then organized the First Commonwealth company, employed agents and sold lots to victims in Wisconsin, Indiana, Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa, North and South Dakota.

One defendant, Richard Thomas of Cleveland, pleaded guilty when called before Judge John P. Barnes today. Two others, A. C. McHenry of Oshkosh, Wis., and Helen Nichols of Akron, Ohio, asked severances, and another pair, Luther Woodruff and Joe Weiss, are at large.

On trial in addition to Beck, Stickney and Gordon are Harry Fleeman, New York; William Meade, Cleveland; Harold Rose, Detroit and Toledo, Ohio; William Woodring, Cleveland; Harry Golby, Toledo; Mort Greenbaum, Cleveland; Leo Shaver, Brooklyn; Jack Harris, Chicago; Harry Lambert, New York, and Barney Wolstein, Chicago.

Named Acting Manager For 2nd WPA District

Madison—(P)—W. B. Stevenson, works progress administration field engineer, was named acting manager today on the second Wisconsin WPA district with headquarters at Green Bay.

Stevenson succeeded Mark Muth, who was nominated by president Roosevelt recently as state administrator, but who has been unable to take his new post because of illness.

The appointment was announced by C. W. Anderson, acting state administrator.

Stevenson, a native of Superior, has been attached to the state WPA headquarters here. He formerly was area engineer in Douglas county and district engineer in the Ashland office.

The second district includes Marinette, Oconto, Calumet, Manitowish, Shawano, Outagamie, Brown, Fond du Lac, Sheboygan, Kewaunee, Door and Winnebago counties.

Allies and Nazis Clash on Oslo and Trondheim Fronts

British Air Fleet Attempts To Keep German Planes From Assisting Nazis in Norway

London—(P)—The British air force is synchronizing raids on German bases in Norway and Denmark, attempting to choke off the Nazi air ferry service which poured German troops into the invaded north country.

Air ministry announcements said both Aalborg, in northern Denmark, and Stavanger, southern Norwegian port, had been raided during the night by British bombers repeating attacks that on the previous night also included Kristiansand, another southern port.

The Stavanger airbase was "bombed and machine-gunned" destroying "a number of enemy aircraft," the ministry said. The Aalborg airbase, which British believe is Germany's only large field in Denmark, was said to have suffered "extensive damage by high explosive and incendiary bombs."

Britain reported all raiders returned safely from the Stavanger attack and only one was missing after the Aalborg foray.

A well-informed source said that British and Norwegian troops had joined "at several places and that joint action in eastern Norway near Lake Mjosen had been 'extremely successful'."

"Strong allied forces were deployed along potential battle-lines spotting Norway's snow-packed mountains and valleys and signs pointed toward impending showdown battles with the Germans."

"The Norwegians rally well," this source said, "getting more and more arms, and the morale of officers and men is very high."

Norwegians Praised

This informant said that answers could be expected in a few weeks to the much-debated military questions: Can a force be maintained in a hostile country by air communications alone? Can troops be landed if the enemy has temporary and local air superiority?

So far, he said, the answer to the second question has been satisfactory from the British viewpoint.

Praising the fighting of the Norwegians and emphasizing that Britain, France and Norway all have troops in the field against Germany now, he declared that the Germans might not have reached Oslo had it not been for "forged orders" and the fact that the Norwegians were caught before their army was mobilized.

U. S. Army Officer, Assistant Military Attache in Sweden, Killed in Air Raid in Norway

Washington—(P)—The state department received word today that Captain Robert M. Losey, assistant military attache at Stockholm, Sweden, was killed in a German bombing raid at Dombas, Norway, yesterday.

Losey was the first American killed on land since the European war started.

The state department said Captain Losey had gone from Stockholm into Norway to assist in removing Americans from the war zone.

Frederick A. Sterling, American minister to Sweden, cabled the state department that he had just received a telegram from Opdal, dated yesterday, and signed by Major Yssum, presumably a Norwegian army officer, which read:

"American Military Attache Captain Losey was killed by German bomber plane at Dombas today. Inform Mrs. Harriman (American minister to Norway)."

"He will be sent tomorrow Monday via Roros to Fjellnas, where instructions from legation are awaited."

Sterling telegraphed the American naval attache, Lieutenant Commander Ole O. Hagen, who is now near Fjellnas on the Swedish-Norwegian border, to retrieve the body and deliver it to the legation.

The state department has instructed its legation at Stockholm to obtain all possible information on the circumstances of the death.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, the minister to Norway, had cabled that on Saturday afternoon, Captain Losey had gone to Norway to contact a party of Americans being moved out under the escort of Lieutenant Commander Hagen. The party was coming over the northern road from Lillehammer, to retrieve the body and deliver it to the legation.

The party of Americans was composed largely of the families of the American legation and consulate at Oslo. It crossed the frontier into Sweden under Hagen's escort yesterday and is now at Fjellnas.

Captain Losey reported for duty to Minister Sterling at Stockholm only a few days ago. He previously had been in Finland as an observer during the Russo-Finnish war.

Captain Losey, 31 years old, was born at Andrews, Iowa, was graduated from West Point in 1929 and last served at Mather field, Calif. He was assigned as assistant military attache for air to Scandinavia in February.

Dombas is on the railroad about 100 miles south, as the crow flies, and a little west of Trondheim. The Rauma river flows nearby.

100,000 Men Now Are Estimated in Field in Norway

2 TOWNS ABLAZE

Sweden Prepares for Possibility of War Crossing Border

BULLETIN

London—(P)—A war office communiqué tonight said British troops have landed at many places in Norway and have achieved "considerable successes despite many difficulties."

Stockholm—(P)—Fast moving columns of British and French troops, striking swiftly inland from debarcation points on Norway's coast, were reported today engaged in a series of fierce battles with German forces on the Trondheim and Oslo fronts.

The conflict in Norway was shaping into a full-fledged war in the modern style, with perhaps 100,000 men in the field—British, French, Norwegians and Germans, some moving behind tanks and others attacking under cover of artillery and aerial bombardments.

The towns of Namsos and Andalsnes, where allied forces have landed in Norway, are aflame, Germany reported today as both sides, sparked by intense rivalry for air supremacy over Norway, stepped up the pace of their aerial warfare.

The Germans have sent warplanes over Norway in droves to drop high explosives on British warships, transports and landing points.

Nazi Air Attacks

DNB, official German news agency, which announced the burning of Namsos and Andalsnes, said German bombs had struck the British heavy blows.

Britain warned inhabitants of Narvik three times today to leave that far northern Norwegian port before a new bombardment starts. The British decision to bombard Narvik again apparently was an answer to the German air raid on Namsos.

Spurred by fear of a further widening of the struggle to the point where it might stop over the Norwegian border, neighboring Sweden achieved peak preparedness short of general mobilization.

Focal points of the fighting apparently were Verdalssora, 35 miles north of Trondheim, and Elverum, 60 miles north of Oslo near the Swedish frontier. Approximately 300 miles of rough terrain separates the two battle fronts.

Blow at Nazis

The fighting around Verdalssora, according to Swedish sources, developed when allied forces, driving south after effecting a landing at Namsos, attempted to break the German hold on the 100-mile railway line linking that port with Trondheim, the key to central Norway.

Verdalssora, doubly important because it lies on the railway line and a highway leading to the Swedish border 30 miles away, was reported in flames as the opposing forces fought for its possession.

The allied troops attempting to stem the German advance north from Oslo were reported to have reached Elverum after traveling more than 180 miles by rail from the west coast port of Andalsnes, which is 100 miles south of Trondheim.

The Norwegian legation here announced early today that the swift-moving allied column, supported by tanks, had attacked the Germans at Elverum after dislodging the invaders from Hamar, 20 miles to the west.

Confusing Reports

There were unconfirmed reports that the British actually had occupied Elverum.

The progress of the fighting in this area, however, was confused by German reports that Nazi troops had reached Lillehammer, 25 miles north of Hamar.

Sweden, holding steadfastly to her policy of neutrality, lodged a strong protest in Berlin against the invasion of Norway.

American Citizens Urged to Consider Moving From Hungary

Budapest—(P)—The United States legation today advised American citizens in Hungary to "decide as to the advisability of leaving for the United States while there still are means of egress available."

The legation notice said American citizens should "consider the effect" which extension of the war to this part of Europe "would have upon the possibility of travel."

A prefatory declaration said the legation "has no information which would lead it to believe that the war will be extended to southern Europe."

There are about 400 American citizens in Hungary, but the legation said that most of these were Hungarian-born persons who went to the United States, were naturalized and then returned to this country to live.

The notice asked Americans to advise the legation of their plans, adding: "If you are remaining in Hungary, please give reasons."

76 Scout Leaders At Spring Parley Of Valley Council

Troop Operation Theme Of Weekend Discussions at Camp

Valley council scout leaders today looked back on one of the most successful spring conferences in council history, a weekend gathering at Gardner Dam that brought good weather, a big turnout, and lively discussions on scouting topics.

Clarence H. Engberg, council executive, reported today that 76 men attended the spring meeting which opened Saturday afternoon and continued until early Sunday afternoon. During the discussions, it was found that of the 76 leaders, the average length of service in scouting was more than five years, the executive said.

With troop operations as the principal subject, sessions were held Saturday evening in the main lodge and Sunday morning outdoors. The scouts took practical courses in pacing and mapping Sunday, hiking about the Gardner Dam property. Chas. Larsen directed the pacing and Don Cole the mapping.

Larsen, Fred Duprey, and Engberg, Appleton, and Lloyd Pinkowsky, Clintonville, were discussion leaders.

The men were organized as a mock scout troop, with Wesley O. Sen, Neenah, as the scoutmaster. Larsen, Pinkowsky, and Cole were assistants.

Orville Yingling, Kaukauna, was senior patrol leader. Other patrol leaders were Walter Fox, William Gust, Duprey, and Ken Pinkerton, Appleton. Ed Bankert, Little Chute; Owen Kito, Kaukauna; and Lee Forest, Marion.

Fear Repudiation of State Highway Fund Obligations

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—The Wisconsin County Boards Association has commented suspiciously on the apparent plan of the state government this year to withhold highway construction funds for 26 Wisconsin counties in order to make possible a diversion of highway receipts to the state general fund.

The association, long a critic of highway diversion policy in the state government predicted that the action of the Heil administration this year in withholding construction allotments from certain counties would ultimately result in repudiation of the state's obligation to those counties.

"Present indications are that as a result of the continued diversion of highway funds during the past year approximately 26 counties will not have any state construction program during the coming year," the association's monthly magazine observed.

It reported that those counties which include projects which involve federal aid funds, and county bond issues, will probably receive their state allocations.

Others, however, numbering about 26, will get only credit on state ledgers showing unexpended balances in their allotments amounting to about $2,000,000 in total, it was said.

"Not only is the so-called 'free fund' of highway construction money being diverted for other than highway purposes, but now for the first time a portion of the regular annual construction funds allocated county by county will be affected."

"Not only will state records now show a credit balance due the highway commission but they will also reflect at the end of this fiscal year

Proper Home Planning Brings Satisfaction

Careful Building Methods Stressed By Theo Utschig

Reliable Construction Means Comfort, Security for Many Years

Proper planning before building a home and good construction methods during the actual process will assure the owner of lasting satisfaction and quality, according to Theo Utschig, general contractor, 400 W. Parkway Boulevard.

Mr. Utschig believes that careful attention to these two factors is most important for the prospective home builder. Adequate planning means that the arrangement of rooms, windows, stairways, etc., will be to the family's liking. Reliable construction means that the home will be attractive, comfortable, and secure for many years.

In speaking of proper home planning, Mr. Utschig comments: "People in figuring out the kind of home they want should for example, try to visualize the living room with the furniture in it. Many people are inclined to build the room first and then find furniture to fit it. The best kind of planning is that in which the furnishings are considered before the home is started."

Many kitchens are poorly planned, Mr. Utschig points out. "A kitchen should be so laid out as to save the housewife as many steps as possible," he says. "One of the most important aims should be to plan a house so the front door and stairway are easily accessible from the kitchen. A housewife shouldn't have to walk through a dining room or living room or both in order to answer the doorbell or go upstairs."

Makes Suggestions
Other suggestions for proper home planning made by Mr. Utschig are as follows:

Location of the downstairs powder room near the hall or kitchen.

Cross-ventilation in upstairs bedrooms, and numerous and adequately-sized closets. It's regarded as old-fashioned to build small closets nowadays. Shoe racks are a handy convenience in closets.

Proper amount of bookcases in the living room, study room, or library, stairways with sufficient width and proper rise, large windows and enough of them. Bay windows, built-in accessories, and proper ventilation in the kitchen.

"A recreation room in the basement is not out of reach of many families building homes," Mr. Utschig comments. "They can be included at a moderate additional expense."

He continues: "But careful planning and deliberate charting before building any home cannot be successful unless there is good, sound construction. The foundation and the frame of any home is of basic importance."

Mr. Utschig points out further that it is to the mutual advantage of the contractor and home builder if they "keep constantly in touch with one another" during the construction of the residence. Thus the home builder will know just what is being done and will feel more satisfied.

"Proper supervision during the building of the home and careful attention to details are essential," Mr. Utschig says.

Maynard Electric Service Jobs Are Given Personal Supervision

Ernest Maynard, head of the Maynard Electric service, 115 E. Spring street, personally supervises his jobs of wiring and of installing fixtures in homes and business places.

His years of experience have qualified him for selecting the right type of fixture for any style of home, be it colonial, early American, modern, English or any other. The home owner or business man need not worry over the problem of what type of fixtures are best suited for his place. The Maynard service will inspect the building and make suggestions for the proper installation.

A large display of fixtures may be inspected at any time at the Maynard display room. The display includes fixtures of various types for porches, living rooms, dining rooms, kitchens, halls, bedrooms, bathrooms and home libraries.

Rush Jobs
The Maynard service also is equipped to do repair work. Jobs taken by the day or on a contract basis and a staff of four men makes it possible for the firm to handle rush jobs efficiently.

Wiring and fixture jobs recently were completed by the Maynard Electric service at the homes of H. F. Diehen, 906 E. Franklin street, and Josephine Engel, 1909 N. Union street.

"Proper wiring in a home is of utmost importance for the safety of the occupants, and our firm is equipped to give complete satisfaction," Maynard stated. "The selection of the proper light fixtures to give an atmosphere in keeping with the style of the home is another problem that should be given serious consideration. We are ready to handle this problem for the new builder or the owner who is remodeling."

The Maynard Electric service also carries a line of electrical appliances for the home, including washing machines, electric irons, sweepers and modernistic door bells.

Successful unless there is good, sound construction. The foundation and the frame of any home is of basic importance."

Mr. Utschig points out further that it is to the mutual advantage of the contractor and home builder if they "keep constantly in touch with one another" during the construction of the residence. Thus the home builder will know just what is being done and will feel more satisfied.

"Proper supervision during the building of the home and careful attention to details are essential," Mr. Utschig says.

Appleton Post-Crescent Begins Work on New Plant Addition

New building in Appleton valued at $29,915, a slight drop from the previous week, was authorized by John A. Pierre, city building inspector last week.

Among the 19 permits granted were four for new residences, one for a plant addition valued at $7,700 and two for small buildings.

The Appleton Post-Crescent was given a permit to erect an addition to its building. The addition will be built to ground level and will be 35 by 57 feet in size. Cost is estimated at $7,700. Work was started last Monday.

A permit to build a residence at 1429 S. Outagamie street was given to R. F. Jarchow, 622 N. Appleton street. The house will be 40 by 34 feet in size and is estimated to cost $7,000. George Bodway, town of Menasha, received a permit to build a residence at 715 S. Story street. The house will be 28 feet long and 24 feet wide with a garage. Cost will be approximately $4,500.

Arnold street, intends to build a 5 by 4-foot addition to his house at a cost of $50.

Office Building
The Gibson company, Inc., was granted a permit to erect an office building, 8 by 12 feet in size, at 131 S. Superior street. Cost is estimated at $600. J. P. Laux received a permit to build a building, 12 by 24 feet in size at 903 N. Union street to store ice.

Other permits granted and estimated values are: C. S. Wagner, 1142 W. Prospect avenue, screen porch, $200; Max Nesebandt, 822 W. Franklin street, remodel garage, $30; Walter Kohl, 1329 W. Summer street, remodel residence, $200; Anton Sperl, 1924 N. Alvin street, build private garage, $100; Bert Dittmer, 1138 W. Harris street, construct dormer, $100; H. H. Clausen, 734 E. North street, build roof over porch, $25; Henry Bastian, 1314 N. Superior street, build garage, $370.

PORCH FOR ALL SEASONS
The pleasure and comfort of a rear or side porch may be enjoyed throughout the year by installing sliding glass panels.

They are readily installed and may be purchased and added to the home with funds obtainable from qualified lending institutions under the Modernization Credit Plan of the Federal Housing Administration.

FIRST-FLOOR WASHROOM
A first-floor washroom, often termed downstairs lavatory or powder room, furnishes a desirable addition to any home. Federal Housing Administration officials point out. Under the Modernization Credit Plan, funds may be obtained from qualified lending institutions with which to install such rooms.

Sound Building
Good houses, at whatever price, can be produced only by the combination of good architecture, well-selected materials, and honest building. Federal Housing Administration officials maintain.

Building, Loan Association Celebrating 21st Birthday

It is noteworthy that the inauguration of a builder's page by the Appleton Post-Crescent comes during the same month in which the Appleton Building and Loan association is celebrating its twenty-first birthday. Geo. H. Beckley, secretary, declared today.

The association has been financing home building, buying and improving for 21 years and, like the Post-Crescent, has become an essential Appleton institution.

We are organized to do two things he continued. "First, to protect the investor's money, keep it safe and make it earn what it can in a secure manner. Second, to loan that money conservatively to help citizens of Appleton own their homes. "Building and loan is a simple business," he stated. "In that simplicity lies its great strength. There is no complicated financial mechanism to break down under stress. No 'trick securities' to blow up. No dangerous straining to make more than is soundly possible and no sacrificing of the investor's best interest so that a selfish few may profit."

The association prides itself in making liberal loans on fair appraisals. Their mortgages differ from the ordinary "straight" mortgage in that the borrower repays each month of the principal and interest part of the principal and interest each month. "There is no dreaded due date when the sum borrowed must be repaid in full or the loan renewed at additional expense."

No Red Tape
Monthly payments include principal reduction and interest and may even be increased to cover taxes and insurance premiums. The borrower may pay off all his loan at any time or make partial payments. From the ordinary "straight" mortgage in that the borrower repays each month of the principal and interest part of the principal and interest each month. "There is no dreaded due date when the sum borrowed must be repaid in full or the loan renewed at additional expense."

AVOID SHRINKAGE
Unseasoned framing lumber is subject to considerable shrinkage which may increase the rate of deterioration of a house. Federal Housing Administration officials say. To avoid such an eventuality, FHA construction requirements stipulate that well-seasoned lumber shall be used on homes securing insured mortgages.

Gochnauer Firm Has High Quality Concrete Blocks

Nothing Is Left to Guess Work in Making of The Product

With a large stock of thoroughly cured building blocks on hand, and a plant capacity of a foundation per day, the Gochnauer Concrete Products company is ready for spring's building demands.

Nothing is left to guess work in the making of the Gochnauer quality cement blocks. Every block has back of it the 45 years of experience of the firm in Appleton. Materials for the blocks are bought on a quality rather than a price basis, yet the blocks are sold at a price no higher than the ordinary cement block.

Materials used in the blocks first are placed in measuring bins, so that exactly the same amount is used in every block—thus assuring the same high quality in each one. An automatic tamper strikes the same number of blows on each block to further make for a consistent high standard. Even the mixing time is set so that it is the same in the making of every block.

The finished block is thoroughly cured for 30 days or more. Every block made by the Gochnauer company has more than met state requirements.

The blocks may be used in the construction of unusually large homes and buildings to the smallest dwelling or cottage. Owners are reminded that the blocks make fires more unlikely than if wood were used. The Haydite block, made by the firm, is recommended for above grade construction. Estimates will be given upon request.

BASEMENT ENTRANCE

Basements today are focal points of adult activity and children's play, yet few have adequate provision for ready exit in case of fire. Most basement rooms can be reached only through the house.

There are ready-cut steel and other type hatchways that lead into the basement from the yard. These may be purchased and installed at surprisingly low cost. They may be financed with a Modernization Credit Plan loan.

Clapper Says European War Has Not Helped Unemployment

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—By creating problems of overshadowing the war has rather effectively smothered the New Deal for the present, but we are still left with a certain problem which is as large as it was last year.

Foreign trade in relief lines has risen sharply because of war demands, but the general boom which set in last fall has flattened out industrial production which rose to an index figure of 128 in December slipped down to 109 in February and probably will show at about 105 for March. Except for machine tool workers and a few others, the rigors of unemployment are about as menacing as ever.

In a letter to Speaker Bankhead, President Roosevelt asks that the budget request for a relief appropriation of $975,000,000 be granted with authority to expend the money during the first eight months of the coming fiscal year, that is during the months July to February inclusive. That amount is a reduction of about one-third from the $1,447,000,000 appropriated for the full current fiscal year. But if spent within eight months, the monthly average expenditure would be about the same—namely about $120,000,000 a month.

Present relief rolls average about 2,000,000. With permission to spend the sum by February, 1941, they could be maintained at present figures. If the money must be spread over 12 months, then the cut would be severe, probably down to about 1,300,000, Mr. Roosevelt says.

In making this recommendation, Mr. Roosevelt stands on the basis adopted for the current year by the economy bloc when it pushed through the relief bill for 1939-1940. Even so he is caught already in a cross-fire.

Left wingers like Representative Marcantonio of New York and David Lasser, head of the Workers Alliance, are voicing criticism of Mr. Roosevelt for asking too little.

At the same time Republicans are hauling out the charge of "slush fund" and election year padding. The inevitable Hamilton Fish again is eloquent on the subject. Representative Taber, ranking Republican member on the house appropriations committee, proposes cutting $200,000,000 off the $975,000,000 requested.

Roosevelt Posing On His Major Problems

But after the political sharpshooters are over, the request of the president is likely to be voted because it is within the limits of current relief expenditures which in themselves represented a drastic screening down of WPA. Republicans are not likely to take the responsibility for going further than that.

Actually Mr. Roosevelt has given them nothing upon which they can justly attack him. He had intended that the $975,000,000 now asked should be stretched over the whole coming fiscal year and that would have presented a further drastic cut in WPA. But now he has to admit that the economic outlook is not good and he can only hope that conditions will improve next winter. Hence he leaves the further decision to the administration which will take office next January and to the new congress which will assemble then.

Mr. Roosevelt is passing on a number of problems for the new administration. The question of increasing the debt limit will have to be faced. New relief appropriations will have to be faced. New taxes will have to be considered. In all Mr. Roosevelt is leaving to the new congress a large collection of headaches.

Some of these, such as the rate-

ing of the debt limit, are passed on to the future because they are embarrassing and difficult to deal with in a campaign year. Others, such as the eight-month relief request, grow out of the uncertainties created by the war which make it difficult to look very far ahead.

WANT AD WEEK

One of the chief purposes of advertising is to acquaint buyers and sellers with opportunities to deal with each other to their mutual profit and satisfaction. Advertising, generally speaking, is merely an announcement that someone is in the market either to buy or sell a commodity or a service.

Want ads printed in newspapers have been doing such a remarkable job of bringing buyer and seller together that they have become an indispensable American institution, and in recognition of this fact National Want Ad Week has been established. This year it will be observed from April 21 to 27.

While there will be no band playing or flag waving in celebration, newspapers are convinced that the "week" will touch upon the interests of more people than many others to which more space is devoted.

The want ad columns of the newspaper are the great bazaar of the modern age. They serve the rich and the poor alike; the widow who has a room to rent, and the millionaire who wants to sell his Rolls Royce. The want ad page is the meeting place of the job-seeker and the man who needs an employee. It brings buyer and seller together, no matter what their wants or their needs.

In a thousand ways these want ads serve the public interest at small cost and with great convenience. The importance of this institution in American life is not exaggerated by devoting a "week" to its recognition.

NEUTRALITY IN 1814

In these days of scuttling boats and battles in neutral waters it might be favorable to the mellowing of our judgment to turn back the pages of history and read how closely related to the present day were wartime activities of over a century ago.

To that end we open a history containing the story of American naval commanders and quete:

"Captain Samuel Chester Reid, commanding the privateer General Armstrong, 246 tons, ninety men, nine guns, sailed from New York September 9, 1814. On September 28 he put in at the Portuguese port of Fayal in the Azores. On the same day the British warships Carnarvon, eighteen guns; Ret, thirty-eight guns; and Plantagenet, seventy-four guns, bound under Commodore Edward Lloyd for Jamaica to join the expedition against New Orleans, entered the same port. In the evening Reid undertook to move closer under the Portuguese fortifications and the Carnarvon sent four boatsloads of men to capture the General Armstrong. Reid challenged, then fired. He beat them off, losing one man killed and one wounded in the affair. The British lost twenty killed and wounded. The Portuguese government warned Lloyd not to violate Portuguese neutrality, but about midnight a dozen British boats bearing about 400 men attacked the General Armstrong. They were repulsed; the American loss in this encounter was two killed and seven wounded. The British loss was put at not less than 175 casualties of all classes. At dawn of September 27 the Carnarvon attacked with broadsides. The General Armstrong's 42-pounder Long Tom drove her back. Captain Reid recognized, however, that the British would then attack in overwhelming force so he scuttled the General Armstrong and abandoned ship. The British completed the job by firing her."

But Captain Reid did not fight for a hollow reason nor were his dead sacrificed in vain. The battle kept the British from sailing on their expedition to New Orleans via Jamaica and gave Old Hickory just that much more time to prepare the hot welcome with which he received Packenham and the British regulars in January of 1815.

But it should be said that Britain apologized to Portugal for violating its neutrality and paid it $1600 in cash for damaging some of the buildings on shore. Our country asked Portugal for $130,000 in damages, a claim that was arbitrated and that we lost for reasons that should be self-evident. But Captain Reid then sued the United States in the Court of Claims and although he lived until 1861 he did not live long enough to see the litigation adjusted. Twenty-one years after he died, in 1882, congress voted $70,000 to pay the obligation.

And the moral from this episode is that Britain still violates the neutrality of anyone who is in her way, but willingly pays the damage, while the United States still delays in the payment of just obligations, taking as much as 65 years on a single case.

TEACHERS' TENURE—A LESSON TO MINORITIES

The state-wide referendum expressed the opinion of Badgerites for the repeal of the Teachers' Tenure bill. The majority against it was 31,000.

This, we think, shows an emphatic condition of opinion when it is considered that rural schools were exempted from the law's operation, Milwaukee schools were covered by another act and teachers over 65 years of age were exempted from its terms, much of which was done in a frantic retreat action to prevent a hostile public opinion from wiping out every vestige of the act.

Teachers are a favored class, and a popular class, among all elements of the population. They merit this popularity for they have earned it. But it remains the decided opinion that their leaders in writing this legislation went too far in demanding preferences and privileges to the hurt of the authority that should be vested in ruling bodies, of which the school board is one.

Labor is always another body popular with the public, and remains so until that public is convinced that it has taken steps which put it in a position from which too many abuses flow. Referendums in various states caused by the deficiencies in the Wagner Act and the arrogance of some labor leaders have demonstrated that all minorities, however, popular or meritorious, need to write about their doors, "Thus far and no further."

The fact that some meritorious teachers may have lost their positions through the misconduct of an occasional school board is not a safe criterion upon which to build a legal principle. No doubt, some teachers who lost their positions were quick to hide their own deficiencies under the charge that it was politics or favoritism that moved against them. But certainly the Tenure Law as passed was likely to create even more injustice in forcing the retention of teachers who had lost spirit, ambition and disposition and were, therefore, not entitled to retention.

If the legislature follows the referendum and repeals the tenure law there will result no marked injustice to the teaching profession. If, however, it wishes the state to gain from the experience obtained in this legislation it will modify that law so as to grant greater authority to the school boards and yet save earnest and deserving teachers from abuses.

EDGING CLOSER TO THE BATTLEFIELD

In the usual language of diplomacy our executive rulers have implied that if Germany invades Holland we will protect the Dutch East Indies from attack, whether by Japan or others.

If this is to be our national policy in the Orient it is next to impossible to understand why we should not protect British India and French Indo-China. And if that is the sort of career the Administration has carved out for us why should we not have protected Finland, Poland and Bohemia?

Is the land in Asia any more sacred than that in Europe? Are our "obligations" to Holland deeper than to Poland?

Slowly but with the dull and inexorable certainty of time we are slipping over the edge into the cockpit.

It would be better luck for us to have Germany strike Holland immediately if it is going to strike at all so we can get into the war before the next election and avoid the hypocrisy of another "He kept us out of war" campaign by another idealist itching under tormenting delusions of grandeur.

We think the American people should be unalterably opposed to a foreign policy that points so unerringly in the direction of destruction.

Or, on the other hand, we should determine to become a warlike nation, provide for a standing army of five million up, devote all the wealth we can make or secure to bombers, battleships, munition dumps and submarines. And we should prevent our great corporations from devoting so much of their income to experimenting in the effort to benefit mankind and devote all the income that can be spared to new machinery of agony and death.

For we cannot police the world unless we police it efficiently. And we cannot police it efficiently unless we go into the business on a grand scale.

We shouldn't go into the business on a grand scale unless we have made up our minds that we are God's chosen people, a super-superior race endowed alone in this world with the qualities of leadership and rulership.

A matter of sympathy in the pending struggle has nothing to do with the case. With great unanimity America hopes against victory coming to the Nazi-Reich.

But America can get along without the Eastern Hemisphere if it will just take care of the Western.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

MAKING THE CHILDREN'S BEDS

She makes the children's beds, and when she bows,
With soft fresh linen and warm covering,
Above the small white altars of their sleep,
It is as if to pray. The quiet house
Is sweet with the first perfumed air of spring.
Under the blinds the pale gold sunbeams creep.
Her thoughts are of her children. The pure white
Of the clean pillowcases is not more
Spotless than her desires; a noble way
For those three darlings growing in her sight
Is her one hope. Then feet upon the floor
Of life must never for a moment stray.
Now she replenishes all linen worn

BY DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN
Washington—A group of farm leaders met the White House to urge Roosevelt to support the Jones bill, which would cut interest rates on government farm loans. And while they got the president's support, they also got an earful on another subject—why the U. S. will not get involved in the European war.

The discussion began when one of the farmers asked Roosevelt whether propaganda and the loss of foreign markets would affect U. S. neutrality. This brought an emphatic negative from the president.

"I don't think the American people will lose their heads to the extent of being drawn into the European conflict," he said in effect. "It is true that the emotions of people can be quickly aroused, but reason and logic always triumph in the end. That's why our democratic form of government has survived so long."

"Take, for example, the arms embargo fight. There was a lot of talk from certain elements during that controversy, that if we lifted the embargo it would drag us into the war. Well, that talk has died down and you don't hear it any more. There was no truth in it and it evaporated."

"The same happened during the debate over extending the reciprocal trade treaties. There was a lot of unfounded talk then, but it has all blown over unless political opportunists inject the issue into this year's campaign."

"What about the Nazi invasion of Denmark and Norway?" asked another of the farm visitors. "Will that endanger our neutrality?"

Again Roosevelt shook his head. "As long," he replied, "as we keep a level head, on feet on the ground and maintain a liberal government, we have nothing to worry about."

RED CROSS DELAYED

The war is all over in Finland, but that country still is having hard luck, this time as a result of the war in Norway. For the U. S. neutrality act now is holding up much needed Red Cross supplies to Finland.

When the Nazis invaded Norway, two American vessels—the Mormacstar and Mormacine—were on the high seas with Red Cross supplies for Finland. Then suddenly Roosevelt extended the combat zone, and the two vessels had to turn back.

The relief materials included hospital tents, warm clothing, layettes, surgical dressings, X-ray machines, and other hospital and medical supplies, some of them the hand-made products of Red Cross volunteer units throughout the country.

The material is desperately needed by the Finnish people, but the Red Cross knows of no way to deliver it.

Poland has been in a similar predicament, but now Red Cross material is getting through in large quantities—six months after the first efforts were made. Delay was caused principally by Nazis, who emphatically denied any need for outside assistance.

Finally the Red Cross received written guarantees that none of the material will be claimed by German authorities, and that no objection will be raised to aiding Jews as well as Gentiles.

POLITICAL CHAFF

Bets are being offered in the senate cloakrooms that now that Senator William King, veteran Utah anti-New Deal Democrat, has strong opposition, he will climb aboard the third term bandwagon. In his last campaign in 1934, King ran as an administration supporter, but a few days after he was safely re-elected rejoined the anti-camp. Running against him this year is Delbert Draper, liberal Salt Lake City lawyer. Since his big vote as a Dewey delegate, Wisconsin Secretary of State Fred Zimmerman, former governor, has started a quiet move to shelve Governor Julius Heil and grab the GOP nomination. National Republican chiefs would like to ditch Heil because of his proclivity for making impolitic statements. Wisconsin GOP county chairmen plan a statewide survey to demonstrate his unpopularity. Despite the many bitter barbs he hurled at Roosevelt, Senator Burr Wheeler has lost intimates he would accept second place if Roosevelt runs again.

UNDER THE DOME

One of the inspiring sights in our democratic government is to see the president of the United States address a joint session of congress. These gatherings include not only the president and members of the house and senate, but also cabinet members, Supreme Court justices, foreign diplomats, members of the president's family, plus social and political leaders—all seated in the house of representatives. But—some members of congress heave a sigh of relief when these sessions are adjourned. What they know, though others do not, is that the roof covering the House chamber is in danger of caving in some day and wiping out the nation's political leaders.

Furthermore, the roof of the senate chamber is supported by similar materials, and architects have recommended that it be replaced.

Serious-minded Horace D. Rouzer, assistant architect of the capitol, solemnly warned members of the senate appropriations committee recently that "in some instances the pins should not be stressed over 12,000 pounds, but computations show stresses up to around 75,000 pounds per square inch." He was referring to the roof on the senate side of the capitol.

Somewhat similar testimony by David Lynn, capitol architect, brought an investigation of the structures which may lead to extensive repairs. Structural engineers have been retained to investigate the condition of the senate and house roofs. Should the experts agree that the senators and congressmen sit in constant danger, a deficiency appropriation will be asked to carry out the proposed construction.

Fact is that about three years ago Thomas W. Marshall, leading structural engineer, recommended that modern fireproof roofs be constructed over both chambers. The roofs were so shaky, Marshall urged that the house and senate should adjourn when there was a heavy covering of snow on the capitol.

However, Senator Robert Taft didn't think much of the Marshall report. The roofs have been there for 60 years, he said, "with snows and everything else that anybody could put on it." Also the cost of the construction was estimated at $385,000 by Marshall, and Bob Taft is economy-minded.

MAIL-BAG

H. G. Washington—The president's public expression on the question of a third term was made at his "Victory Dinner," March 4, 1937. He told of a conversation with a member of congress, and quoted himself as saying to the congressman, "My great ambition on January 20, 1941, is to turn over this desk and this chair in the White House to my successor, whoever he may be, with the assurance that I am at the same time turning over to him as president, a nation intact, a nation at peace, a nation prosperous, a nation clear in its knowledge of what powers it has to serve its own citizens. I do not want to leave it to my successor in the condition in which Buchanan left it to Lincoln."

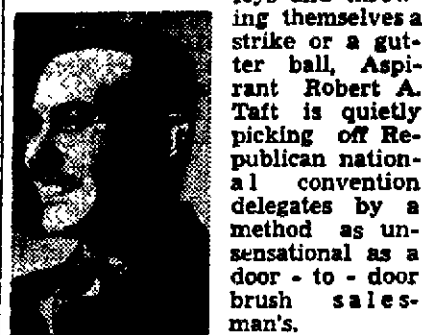

B. S. Chattanooga, Tenn.—Secretary Hull has made no public statement about probable extension of the war, but in private conversations he has said that judging from the way things are going, we may expect to see the whole of Europe embroiled before the end of the year.

And soiled, and for their health and comfort places
Fine sheets upon the beds. So she would take
All sheets that may be clouded and forlorn,
And fling them, like the crumpled pillowcases,
Down to be washed clean, for her children's sake.

A Bystander In Washington

BY JACK STINNETT

Washington—While other Presidential candidates are setting themselves up in the state primary alleys and throwing themselves a strike or a gutter ball, Aspirant Robert A. Taft is quietly picking off Republican national convention delegates by a method as unsensational as a door-to-door brush salesman.

Stinnett—The Ohio senator's headquarters in the Raleigh hotel here, henchmen claim he already has the promise of 300 state delegates, will have twice that many before the boys get together in Philadelphia in June. Some political commentators agree on the first figure.

Big, quiet, mathematically minded Senator Taft is using a pre-convention technique as old as the hills... direct-contact. In the nine months or so since he let his name be bandied about for top spot, on the 1940 Republican signboard, he has made more than 300 speeches, has set up an organization or "contact force" in every one of the 48 states.

Although lacking in that remarkable memory for first names and plain faces by which President Roosevelt and General Farley repeatedly knocked the hinterland politicians for a row of votes, Senator Taft has been showing himself as often as congressional duties would permit. The object is twofold: (1) To convince hoped-for constituents that he's good deal more than the unstarved stuffed-shirt which opponents would make him out; (2) to hammer home in plodding speeches his conservative theories of government.

His First Assistant

Secondary defense in the Taft campaign is Mrs. Taft. Martha, as the folks back in Ohio call her, is daughter of a one-time solicitor general of the United States and what her husband hasn't in stamp-speech pyrotechnics, Mrs. Taft has.

Already a veteran of Ohio politics in her husband's behalf, Mrs. Taft has mapped out a pre-convention itinerary that reads like Mrs. Roosevelt's "my three months." Her first four weeks of speech-making from Massachusetts to West Virginia, with sorties into Pennsylvania and Indiana.

Possessed with a dramatic sense which he's drawing out of his husband's lack of it, Mrs. Taft has a penchant for straight applause from her audience, where, with the same lines, the Senator would get none. Aiding considerably in whipping up an assembly is her sense of humor.

Back in Cleveland on the home-front, directing the flood of literature and playing liaison officer for the whole Taft drive is David S. Ingalls.

Ingalls flies his own airplane, covers thousands of miles, keeps headquarters here in a constant dither answering telephone calls between breakfast and dinner from cities a thousand miles apart. Ingalls, 41, is campaign manager. A former assistant secretary of the navy for aeronautics (under President Hoover), he was known during the World war as "the navy's only flying ace" won the D. S. C. and other honors before he was 20.

In the personal conduct of his campaign, Taft has changed his technique not a whit from his tyro days. In Cincinnati he started out as a doorbell-ringing precinct worker, in spite of his family name and silver-spoon background. He's been ringing the bell ever since. As one commentator pointed out, the electorate "scoffs at him during a campaign, votes for him at election."

In his fight for the senate job, he best colorful, glad-handing Judge Arthur Day for a nomination and, in the election, bumped New Deal-backed Robert J. Bulkley off of the track. Taft's weapons: 600-odd speeches, a reputation for integrity, a constantly colorless reiteration of his theories of government and the assistance of Mr. Taft.

Unlike many politicians, Senator Taft writes all his own speeches, mostly from notes scribbled into his pockets whenever an idea occurs to him. In his campaigning, he travels without a retinue, consults no one about what he is going to say, drives his press department frantic by failing to give them a transcript of his speeches more than an hour before they are made.

Just a Step Behind the News

By Dave Boone

The newspaper publishers hold their annual convention this week and I don't know where you'd find a bunch of Americans striving so hard to do a good job for so little money and under so many difficulties. Every year their hair gets whiter and their wrinkles deeper. Publishing a newspaper ain't what it used to be.

To be a publisher today a man has got to be a combination business genius, miracle worker, public servant and all around iron man. All he has to have outside of that are lots of luck, plenty of breaks, a good supply of steel helmets and bumpers front and rear.

They convene in New York to go over their problems, but I don't see how they can unload all their problems in one week.

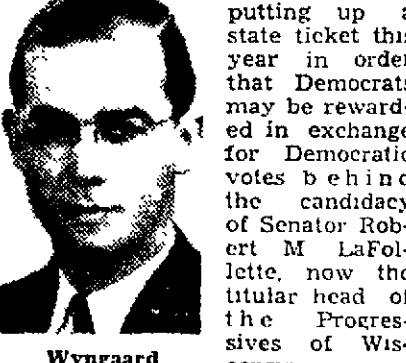

Years ago about all a man needed to start a newspaper was a little political help, a good record as a golf companion, a small plant, a few thousand dollars and a rugged constitution. Today he has to have the help of providence, a big bond issue, a charmed life, a minimum amount of labor disturbances and plenty of patience with the NLRB, the SEC and the various state officers. Welcome publishers, and may your patience continue to hold out.

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—Somehow the idea has been circulated around the state that the Progressive leadership will refrain from putting up a state ticket this year in order that Democrats may be rewarded in exchange for Democratic votes behind the candidacy of Senator Robert M. La Follette, now the titular head of the Progressives of Wisconsin.

How that totally erroneous conception of prospective machinations in the Democratic and Progressive parties arose it is hard to say, unless it is the result of wishful thinking among some Democratic followers. For there is not a single acknowledged Progressive leader or spokesman who will give you a respectful audience when you question him about the alleged scheme.

DEAL YES

It is true that the Progressives will be eager to get Democratic votes for their senator this year, but their eagerness, or fear if you will, has not reached the pitch that they have even breathed the suggestion that the absolute scuttling of their state party is worth the bargain. The plain fact is that the best-informed Progressives are fully confident that they will get Democratic votes for La Follette without excessive concessions, simply because the Roosevelt blessing will be forthcoming and because the president's Wisconsin followers, as recently during the April delegate contest, publicly declared their opinion that La Follette is the best New Dealer in the U. S. senate.

Progressives are confident that the Democrats will not oppose La Follette by putting up a candidate against him. Perhaps the Democrats will have to go through the motions but the votes will go to the Progressive candidate.

Because it is natural for them to expect such Democratic support, there is no basis whatever for the belief that the withdrawal of the Progressive state ticket in order to give the Democratic state slate a chance to win is possible, or likely.

But even should headquarters become panicky at Bob's reelection prospects, and decide that such an unprecedented act would be warranted, there is the best assurance in the world that it would fail in the fact some five or six would-be Progressive governors will never stand for it. There's the situation. Not only is it exceedingly unlikely that such a rash plan will ever be adopted by the Progressive leadership, but even if it should be, the party and the ambitious state office candidates, will never consent to it.

WARM FEET

Governor Heil was interrupted at his press conference this week by a long distance telephone call from Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota, political youngster chosen by the Republican national committee to keynote the national convention in Philadelphia in June.

"Hello, young man, how are you?" demanded Heil. "Are you going to run for governor again?"

Stassen apparently told him he planned to become a candidate for reelection, for Heil replied:

"Yes, that's the way it is. We hardly have a chance to get our feet warm under our desks and the term is up."

CAGEY
Incidentally, Heil has now made it plain that he is a candidate for office this year, although he refuses to be put on the spot in naming it. Unlike his usual self, he was unusually adroit in handling reporters' questions on the subject this week, and some of his auditors wondered if he is trying to maintain a position in which he can turn to a senate candidacy in the event the state convention refuses to endorse him for governor. Indicating that his present predilection

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

HEART DISEASE

According to Dr. Charles H. Goodrich, cardiovascular disease (heart-artery disease, including atherosclerosis and chronic nephritis) is usually transmitted by criss-cross inheritance, that is to say sons inherit poor arterial material from mothers who had CVD (cardiovascular disease) and daughters inherit poor arterial material from fathers who had arteriosclerosis, angina pectoris, chronic interstitial nephritis, stroke of paralysis or other form of CVD. Dr. Goodrich even implies that sons are unlikely to inherit the tendency to CVD from sclerotic fathers and daughters are unlikely to inherit the tendency from sclerotic mothers. How much weight this view or opinion of the heredity of heart-artery trait or quality deserves in the selection of wife or husband is beyond the ken of Dr. O. Doc Brady. Even Dr. Goodrich questions the wisdom of interfering with nature's plan of procreation without careful consideration.

But the outstanding cause of cardiovascular disease, Dr. Goodrich believes and I have been more and more constrained to think in recent years, is anoxemia or anoxia (deficiency of oxygen in the blood or in the cells and tissues of the body). One instance of anoxia cited by Dr. Goodrich is subnormal supply of oxygen due to chronic irritation of nasal mucous membranes from daily smoking. We often see a smoker, cigarette or cigar in mouth," observes Dr. Goodrich, "busy with both hands, trying to overcome dyspnoea (difficult breathing) by dodging smoke and shifting cigarette or cigar, and yet he can hold on some minutes before he gives up and tries for a compensatory intake of oxygen."

He? My observation is that the feminine smoker can take it with less obvious distress than the masculine smoker shows, altho, notwithstanding prophecies I made when girls and women began to smoke in the excessive way they do, there has been no marked increase in the prevalence of thromboangitis obliterans (Buerger's disease), angina pectoris, coronary thrombosis or other diseases attributed to smoking, among women, so far as I know.

Analysis of the blood made by Dr. H. B. Hansen and A. B. Hastings (Jour. A. M. A., May 19, '39) showed that persons not exposed to automobile gases or other sources of carbon monoxide generally have 15 per cent saturation of the blood with carbon monoxide; smokers show from 3 per cent to 6 per cent saturation of the blood with carbon monoxide. Of course the presence of carbon monoxide in the blood is in effect anoxia or anoxemia. Perhaps it would be more accurate to attribute the tendency of smokers to develop cardiovascular degeneration to their carbon monoxide anoxia than to the vague irritation of mucous membranes mentioned by Dr. Goodrich.

The best treatment for carbon monoxide asphyxia is artificial respiration by the prone pressure (Schaefer) method with an inhalator to supply a mixture of pure oxygen and 7 per cent carbon dioxide. I believe a few inhalations of this same mixture of oxygen and carbon dioxide would benefit any smoker who smokes excessively. Or as an alternative the heavy smoker should practice Belly Breathing regularly. In fact every smoker should practice Belly Breathing. If you don't know how, send a stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for monograph on Belly Breathing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Arthritis

Would the reduction diet given is for the governorship. Heil added pointedly, however, that if the citizenship wants him to be a senator, he is willing to heed the voice of the "citizenship."

in your book "Rules for Reducing" have any effect on chronic arthritis? Since reducing eighteen pounds by your method I have experienced grateful relief from longstanding arthritis in knees and ankles.

(Mrs. M. T. F.)
Answer—Not the diet so much as the reduction—loses weight off from the affected joints, gives them a break. Monograph on "Arthritis" sent on request—inclose stamped envelope bearing your address. "Rules for Reducing," 60-page booklet, twenty-five cents coin.

U. S. Government States Position in Note to Southern Neighbor

Washington—Pride as an obstacle to the settlement of international disputes has appeared often in recent history but never so pointedly as in the controversy between the Mexican government and the United States.

Lawrence

For more than two years now, the Mexican people have been given to understand by their government that the Washington administration really didn't mind the seizure of the oil properties of American citizens.

But the present situation would never have arisen if truth and full publicity had been permitted to permeate to the Mexican people. Thus on March 26, 1938 the United States government wrote a note which made virtually every point that has been made in the note of April 3, 1940. But the earlier note has never been made public. The Mexican government objected and the Washington government deferred to its wishes in the hope of advancing a settlement.

Bad Policy

The controversy is not difficult to understand. Any government may seize the property of foreigners if it wishes to do so, but it must pay for the properties seized. It is a bad policy to seize foreign property because it discourages investment in the future, but once seizure is made there must be prompt payment. The Mexican government goes not have the financial resources to pay for the oil properties. It has made several suggestions of a vague character about paying for the properties out of future oil taken from the wells over a period of years. This is not prompt or adequate compensation within the meaning of the term in international relations.

The United States government has asked that the controversy be submitted to arbitration. This the Mexican government, according to latest reports, is about to decline because of Mexican "pride" which presumably in this instance fears the result of an impartial adjudication.

Die Has Been Cast

But the die has been cast here. The United States government has taken its final position. If arbitration is rejected, the congress of the United States will receive full details of the controversy and action will be up to both houses. There has been reports that congress would cut off the silver subsidy on which Mexico counts so much. But this is an unfortunate coupling of two things that are really unrelated. The silver subsidy on imports is on the way out anyway irrespective of the outcome of the controversy with Mexico about oil. Within the next year, the silver subsidy to Mexico will be a thing of the past. Friendship with Mexico might have been a factor in retaining the subsidy for a time, but this no longer is true. The trend here is to remove the silver subsidy while President Cardenas is in office on the theory that if it is to be removed anyhow it ought not to be a factor handicapping the new president when the term of the present incumbent runs out this year. For it is believed unfavorable economic results within Mexico will follow the elimination of the silver bounty and it is hoped here that the silver question can be kept wholly separate from the oil problem.

Mexican-American relations have been rather friendly now over a period of many years but President Cardenas, possibly helpless because of the dictatorship which labor unions maintain over his policies, has failed to strengthen the bonds especially at a critical time in the world.

Mexico in the Wrong

Mexico is plainly in the wrong. To take something that does not belong to you is to violate an old rule

Today and Tomorrow

BY WALTER LIPPMAN

The Three Non-Belligerents

The Allies and the Nazis are in contact by land, sea and air in a theater of war which extends from Narvik, in northern Norway, to the point where the Franco-German frontier touches Switzerland. But their main forces are not engaged; the fighting is essentially a matter of raids and skirmishes in which neither side has been able or willing to risk a decisive battle. As yet the Norwegian campaign is in relation to the whole war no more than a minor operation involving such small forces that neither side can conceivably win the war in Norway. The operation can become decisive only in so far as it leads somehow to the opening up of a battlefield on which the main forces can fight.

Until a greater battlefield is opened up to the armies and to the air forces, the true measure of success for either side is not the number of towns captured, or even the number of ships sunk; it is how the course of the fighting affects the judgment of the rulers of the three large non-belligerent states—Italy, Russia and Japan. The grand object of Hitler is to entice Mussolini, Stalin and the Japanese government to join him in a concerted assault on the Franco-British empires; he can succeed only if he can convince of human conduct and for a government to take it without paying for it is so widely condemned as without conscience that it is difficult to see why the "pride" of a nation which indulges in such wrong-doing must be saved.

Mexico is a country which has had plenty of friction with the Catholic church on political grounds but never have her leaders professed any abandonment of the Christian faith. To acknowledge error and to undo a wrong is a fundamental principle of Christian doctrine. The Mexican government would win the plaudits of Latin-America and the United States if in the present circumstances it brushed aside "pride" in favor of the right. The communists in Mexico who believe in looting private property have insidiously been endeavoring to influence the Mexican government. To let the case go to arbitration would at once be a blow to communism in Mexico and to the misguided radicals who have been willing to sacrifice the good relations of their country with their northern neighbor rather than let fair trial of international standing take evidence and reach a binding verdict. To reject arbitration is to refuse processes of reason and to insist on the right of seizure by force—a doctrine which thus far has led only to tragedy throughout the world.

On the other hand, if Hitler is going to win the war, then it is no less dangerous for Italy to stay out of the war. A victorious Nazi Germany would not fail to resent fiercely the fact that for the second time Italy had not fulfilled her pledges; the Italians hold the Tyrol which is a very German land; they hold Trieste which is the natural outlet of Central Europe to the Mediterranean. The Italians have interests in Albania, Yugoslavia, Hungary, and Rumania which are directly in the path of the German imperialist expansion.

A Nazi victory, obtained without

Italian help, would be supremely dangerous for Italy. Therefore, Italy's only chance to save anything from this desperate situation is to join the Germans if they are winning, to join them before it is too late to contribute anything important to the Nazi victory, yet not too soon to be fatally hurt by the Allies.

No wonder Mussolini insists upon being counted as vehemently pro-German while he seeks to decide what is the exact moment when he can and must act the way he talks. His real danger is that the one side or the other, or both, may tire of his vacillation between unfulfilled threats and unfulfilled promises, and push him overboard.

Stalin Anxious

Russian policy is no less clearly dictated by a desire to estimate correctly the chances of Hitler's victory. For Stalin is animated not by the communist ideology but by fear of the German army. Every move he made reflects this fear. Russia is large but very weak, a victorious Nazi Germany would certainly carry out the avowed program of Hitler in Mein Kampf which is, among other things, to make most of European Russia a colony in which the Germans are the ruling race and the Russians are a subject people.

Stalin did not join the Franco-British alliance because he believed, correctly enough, that Russia would receive the brunt of the attack, and because he feared, not without some justification, that the western powers might be tempted to let the war become an anti-communist crusade. He made his agreement with Germany in order to avoid having to fight Germany, and out of the partnership he got at no cost at all the best strategic frontier which it is possible for Russia to have. Against a victorious Germany no frontier would be good enough for the Russians; but the present frontier is the best there is.

The Finnish war was also the product of Stalin's fear of Germany. Nobody believed the Russians when they said that they were "menaced" by Finland. That was a hypocritical lie. Stalin did not mean Finland. He meant Germany, though it was not expedient to say so. What he has taken from Finland is what the Russians require to defend themselves in the north against a German attack. The same motive inspires their claim against Rumania for Bessarabia. This province dominates the mouth of the Danube and it contains the only feasible land route from Russia to the Mediteranean. The Russian interest in Bessarabia is fundamentally the Russian interest in keeping Germany out of the Black Sea and in keeping open Russia's access to the Mediterranean.

Finland is the key to Russo-German relations in the north; Poland is the key in the middle; Bessarabia is the key in the south. This has been recognized for a hundred and fifty years, and in the Napoleonic Wars, as in the wars of our era, Russia's conflict with Germany has turned on Finland, Poland, and Bessarabia. Russia won them all in the Napoleonic Wars, partly in diplomacy and partly by conquest. Russia lost them when she was knocked out by the other war in 1917. She has regained all but Bessarabia by diplomacy and by conquest, and Bessarabia is still an open question.

These Russian gains are, however, precarious. They cannot surely be held if Hitler falls and Germany becomes once more a normal European state. The hesitations of Stalin arise out of his delicate balance of interest. He cannot afford Hitler's victory. But Stalin must be with Hitler if Hitler wins. Stalin cannot afford a complete western victory. But he must not be at war with the Allies if the Allies win. So, like Mussolini, he is watching the war with profound anxiety.

Japanese Also Must Be On Winning Side

The Japanese also are in a position where they must pick the winner where they are trapped in China. If the Allies win in Europe, a British fleet will return to the Far East, and Japan will be compelled to listen to reason about the Chinese affair. If, on the other hand, the British are defeated in Europe, then Japan will establish a very great empire in Asia and the Pacific. She will conquer China by seizing the Netherlands Indies; with these islands in her possession it will no longer be the United States which can threaten Japan with an embargo on oil. It will be Japan which will threaten the United States with an embargo on rubber and tin, and with measures not so very short of war in the Philippines about which, to put it bluntly, we alone should not be strong enough to do anything much.

Moreover, since an Allied defeat in Europe will mean that all hell will break loose on the European and African side of the Atlantic, not to speak of revolutionary coups in the Norwegian style in Latin America, the United States will have to bring its Navy back to the region of the Panama Canal so that this one-ocean Navy may be able to act defensively in either ocean. We shall have nothing further to say about Asia or about the islands of the Pacific, and we shall not be too comfortable about Alaska.

The Japanese, therefore, have a great stake in an Allied defeat. But they cannot afford to be wrong in their judgment as to whether the Allies are going to be defeated. They, too, need to be with the ultimate winners. Yet unlike Italy, which cannot really afford to act until the last phase of the war is in sight, the Japanese could afford to act if they were sure that Hitler was doing enough damage to keep the British occupied in Europe for several years. The conquest of Holland and Belgium might be regarded in Tokyo as sufficient damage. That is why the position in the Far East is, in spite of all assurances, so very critical.

On what Rome, Moscow, and Tokio think are the results of the fighting from Narvik to Switzerland their policies will depend. The policies of Italy, Russia and Japan will determine whether the struggle can be localized in northwestern Europe and decided there or whether it is to become, in effect, world-wide.

"FASTEST BASE-RUNNER IN BASEBALL"

Fleet-footed George Case—leading base-stealer of the major leagues—SMOKES THE SLOWER-BURNING CIGARETTE—CAMEL

GEORGE CASE, Joe DiMaggio, "Bucky" Walters, Johnny Mize... so many top-flighters in America's favorite sport prefer America's favorite cigarette... Camel. George Case tells his experiences at right. Let your own experience convince you how much more pleasure there is in smoking when your cigarette is slower-burning... made from costlier tobaccos. Smoke Camels. Enjoy the extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor that only Camel's matchless blend of costlier tobaccos and slower way of burning can give. Get more pleasure per puff and more puffs per pack (see below).

HE'S SAFE AT SECOND by a split second! Yes, it's another stolen base for George Case. He stole 51 bases last season... led the major leagues... won wide acclaim as the "fastest man in baseball." It makes your legs ache to watch him, he runs so fast. But when George lights up a cigarette, speed is out. "No fast burning for me," he says. "I always smoke the slower-burning brand... Camel. Camels give me several big extras in smoking."

OFF THE DIAMOND, George Case (below) prefers a slower pace... he likes to fish... smokes Camels a lot. He says: "Slower-burning Camels are more than mild—they're extra mild and extra cool. The more I smoke Camels, the more I like their full, rich flavor." Yes, the more you smoke Camels, the more you'll appreciate their extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor.

SPEED COUNTS IN BASE-RUNNING—BUT IN A CIGARETTE IT'S SLOW BURNING THAT COUNTS WITH ME. SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS GIVE ME THE BIG "EXTRAS" IN SMOKING PLEASURE... AND EXTRA SMOKING, TOO

SMOKERS: SAVE THE COST OF THE STATE CIGARETTE TAX

Smokers who live in communities where certain state cigarette taxes are in effect can save the cost of the tax—and, in some instances, more—through smoking Camels. (See panel at right.) When you are a Camel smoker, you get this unique economy—and all the extra enjoyment of cooler, milder smoking—the fragrance and delicate taste of finer, more costly tobaccos.

SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS

In recent laboratory tests, Camels burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

More Than 500 Students Take Part in Festival at Manawa

Manawa — Practical experience in preparation for district and state tournaments next month was afforded more than 500 student musicians representing six high schools at the second annual Central Wisconsin conference music festival here Saturday afternoon and evening.

No awards or ratings were made but constructive criticism was offered the directors of each musical organization by Prof. E. C. Moore of the Lawrence Conservatory of Music, Appleton, and A. A. Glockzin of the Appleton public schools. Perhaps the most colorful and impressive events of the day were the parade of bands at 4:30 and the concert by the mass band of 60 pieces in the evening. There were six bands in the parade including the senior and junior bands from Weyauwega, and the senior organizations from Manawa, Waupaca, Amherst and Pulaski. The mass band was comprised of students from the representative schools.

Large crowds attended both afternoon and evening activities and hundreds of persons lined village streets for the parade. The afternoon program included individual concerts by each band in the high school gymnasium and selections by vocal groups in the grade school auditorium. Included among the latter units were the Manawa girls' chorus, Amherst girls' chorus, Weyauwega mixed chorus, Marion girls' chorus, Waupaca girls' chorus, Manawa boys' chorus, Marion boys' chorus, Waupaca mixed chorus, Marion mixed chorus and Amherst boys' chorus.

In addition to the band concert in the evening, were selections by an orchestra composed of Manawa, Waupaca and Weyauwega students; cornet trio, Marion; double quartet, Amherst; boys' quartet, Marion; girls' trio, Manawa.

An evening luncheon was served students by ladies' organizations of St. Paul's Lutheran church, Zion Lutheran church and the Methodist church while directors and principals were entertained at a luncheon at the Odd Fellows hall. Mr. Moore and Mr. Glockzin presented their criticisms at this time.

Carlton Patt, music director of the grade and high schools here, and Roy R. Bloomquist, principal of the high school, were in general charge of arrangements. Directors of music at the schools that participated are Ernest Weber, Waupaca; Robert Oliver, Amherst; Howard Chase, Weyauwega; Elmer Eens, Marion, and Arthur Kussman, Pulaski.

Three Youths Get Ducking in River When Canoe Upsets

Three Appleton youths discovered how uncomfortable the Fox river is in April as a place to swim after their canoe overturned about 6:30 Saturday evening near Kimberly. The youths went fishing and got their ducking in middle of the widest part of the river at that point. "It was a long swim in the cold water," they said. "We didn't get any fish but we got back and we got wet."

The three are Johnny Muenster, 1114 N. Durker street, Chris Mulren, Jr., 3030 E. Wisconsin avenue, and Allan Talbot, 317 E. North street.

Swedish territory for the purpose of photographing fortifications. The Norwegian legation here said that Norwegian troops, cooperating to the fullest with their French-British allies, were putting up strong resistance in seven main sectors between Oslo and the Arctic port of Narvik.

Fortress Holds Out

Rock-ribbed Hegra fortress was reported fighting off German attacks from two sides, but military authorities said that because of the experience of its commander, Major Holtzman, it might be able to hold out for a long time.

Reports from Narvik indicated that the Germans still were holding the town, although allied troops apparently were occupying positions to the north and south.

The German garrison was said to have been strongly reinforced by troops flown in by airtail transports. Seventeen members of the families of United States legation officials in Norway arrived at the Swedish border town of Fjallnäs early today after a 120-mile journey from Lillehammer.

Leaders in City State and Nation Join to Pay Tribute To Former Governor Kohler

The death of former Governor Walter J. Kohler evoked high tributes from national state and city leaders today.

Mayor Goodland and Appleton political leaders mourned the passing of the industrialist and paid high tribute to his leadership as a business man, citizen and governor. Governor Heil said the flag on the state capitol at Madison would fly at half staff for the next 15 days as a tribute to Kohler.

Among the comments were: Mayor John Goodland, Jr.: "The former governor's industrial and public service record will long be remembered in Wisconsin and the nation. We have lost a big man. He was a busy man but he gave freely of his time in public service to better the lot of his fellow men. His municipal development, Kohler, is famous as a model city throughout the nation."

Dr. C. L. Kolb, Outagamie county Republican chairman: "The state will sorely miss Walter J. Kohler, a great industrialist and a man who took an active part in the affairs of government. He was a man who believed in being a servant of the public and was a fine example of a true American citizen."

Gustave J. Keller, president of the Democratic party organization of Wisconsin and chairman of the Outagamie county Democrats: "Walter J. Kohler contributed to the state and nation not only in the development of his great industry but also in actual and constructive participation and leadership in its public and political affairs. To remain true to our representative form of government, we need the continued activity of men like former Governor Kohler. His influence will be missed in Wisconsin."

Former President Herbert Hoover, national chairman of the Finnish Relief Fund of which Mr. Kohler was state chairman: "I was greatly shocked to hear of Mr. Kohler's passing. He was an enlightened industrial pioneer, a great public servant, and a fine American. His passing is a loss to the country."

Governor Julius P. Heil: "In the sudden death of Walter J. Kohler, Wisconsin has lost one of its strongest industrial leaders. A great enterprise is a monument to his business ability. He was a public spirited citizen whose mind labored for the upbuilding of his fellow men. He was a good governor. His life is an inspiration for the best in citizenship. The flag at the capitol shall be at half staff for 15 days as a tribute to our former governor."

Senator Alexander Wiley: "In the passing of Governor Kohler, the state and nation sustain a great loss. He was a builder, not only creating jobs and material wealth, but a man of ideas in statecraft, square dealing and promise; a man who got things done; a man who had faith in America."

Former Governor Philip F. LaFollette: "He was an able and distinguished governor and citizen of Wisconsin. Regardless of any partisan lines, everyone in the state is shocked at his death and extends sincere sympathy to his wife and relatives."

Fred R. Zimmerman, secretary of state and former governor: "The death of Mr. Kohler removes from the state and nation a citizen who had won recognition both locally and abroad. He will be missed greatly."

Former Governor Albert G. Schmedeman: "I am terribly shocked to hear of Mr. Kohler's death. I think he was one of the greatest governors the state has ever had. Wisconsin has suffered a great loss."

Ralph S. Kingsley of Kenosha, president of the Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce: "Walter J. Kohler ranked among Wisconsin's outstanding citizens by virtue of his contributions to the industrial, civic and political life of the state. Wisconsin will long remember him for his businesslike administration as governor, for his great philanthropies and for his untiring zeal on behalf of his fellow men as a friend and counselor."

Erwin Albrecht, president of the village of Kohler: "Mr. Kohler's death was very much of a shock to all of us here. Without Mr. Kohler's guidance, I doubt if the village could be what it is today. He spent a great deal of money and wisdom in planning the village far in advance. He is a loss we shall be unable to replace."

That one young man who stood for an hour Thursday evening in the line-up of people at Belling's drug store waiting to reserve seats for Appleton MacDowell Male chorus concert for Tuesday night, was greatly chagrined when his turn arrived to discover that he was in the wrong line-up. He wanted tickets for the Haresfoot show which, at that time, was just about to go in its opening chorus at Appleton High school auditorium.

Erwin Albrecht, president of the village of Kohler: "Mr. Kohler's death was very much of a shock to all of us here. Without Mr. Kohler's guidance, I doubt if the village could be what it is today. He spent a great deal of money and wisdom in planning the village far in advance. He is a loss we shall be unable to replace."

That one young man who stood for an hour Thursday evening in the line-up of people at Belling's drug store waiting to reserve seats for Appleton MacDowell Male chorus concert for Tuesday night, was greatly chagrined when his turn arrived to discover that he was in the wrong line-up. Gantter Predicts Strong Team for Valley Loop Race

Local Talent Will be Used For All but Battery Positions

Kaukauna — With practices slated to begin this week, a strong club to represent Kaukauna in the Fox Valley baseball league is being assembled by William J. Gantter, manager of the squad. Local talent will be used for all but the battery positions.

Gantter said yesterday, today Gantter plans to contact a pitcher and catcher, with the outside additions to give the city a team which will be among the favorites in this summer's race.

Last season the Kaws led the league in hitting, with a collective average of more than .300, but inconsistent mound work held the team down.

Players Sign Up
Gantter reports that all of the players who were with last year's team have signified they will be out again, and that the team's captain will be named this week.

Outfielders on the 1939 team included Ves Kappell and Joey Vils, veterans of half a dozen seasons. Infielders were Ray Dietrich, Ralph Wurdinger, Victor Van Drasek, Carl Schuler and Joey Gertz. Wurdinger topped the batters with a .384 mark.

Toss-up Between Republicans, Democrats if Election Were Held Now—Summer Meetings May Change Story

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J.—The first state-by-state "preview" of party strength in the 1940 campaign — just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion — shows the Democrats and Republicans more closely matched throughout the country today than in any presidential election for 24 years.

Dr. Gallup as the campaign gets under way, the final state-by-state tabulations show, and if the election were today the indications are that the Democratic party would lead in 31 of the 48 states. They would capture about 317 out of a total of 531 electoral votes.

But the Democratic lead in several states is so slim—notably in New York and Minnesota—that a shift of only 1 percentage point would completely alter the picture and throw a majority of electoral votes to the GOP. Political observers will have to go back to the Wilson-Hughes race of 1916 to find an election where the two parties proved to be so evenly matched in popular strength.

Where the two parties will actually stand next November—or even a month from now—depends on a multitude of factors. Political observers should remember that it is still more than six months until election day, and that the only factor which can be measured at present is party strength—as of April. The candidates themselves have not yet been nominated and it is impossible to predict how events at home or overseas will influence the opinions of 45,000,000 U. S. voters.

But though the present survey is not a forecast of the election itself, it does indicate that — from the standpoint of party strength—the Democrats are entering the presidential campaign with a slight advantage.

The Institute asked a cross-section of voters in every state "Which party would you like to see win the presidential election this year?" Throughout the country as a whole the survey shows 54 persons in every 100 with definite party choices at present say they favor a Democratic administration in Washington for the next four years, while 46 per cent favor the GOP. About one person in seven (14%) is undecided about his party choice.

Since the Democrats rolled up 62 1/2 per cent of the vote (major party vote) four years ago, there has been a Republican gain nationally of about 8 1/2 points.

214—ELECTORAL VOTES

Note by Dr. Gallup: The reader should remember that some margin of error may be involved in every sampling operation, due to the size of the sample itself. In the present survey the statistical probabilities are at least 95 in 100 that the average error per state resulting from size of sample will not exceed 4 per cent. Actually, in 11 state surveys conducted by the Institute since 1936 the error from all causes (cross-section errors as well as errors due to size of sample) has averaged only 3 1/2 per cent.

—as reflected in the Institute survey:

The Republican party is the "majority" party today in the six New England states—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Just as in 1936, the two most Republican states in the Union are Maine and Vermont. (See adjoining box for details.)

The Democrats are the "majority" party in the South and West. Every one of the 24 states south of the Mason-Dixon line and west of the Rocky Mountains must be counted on the Democratic side at the present time.

But in the area between New England and the Rockies—in the industrial East, the Great Lakes states and the farm belt, in other words—opinion is so evenly divided that anything can happen. The Republican party is slightly ahead in this area as a whole. Here, in short, will be the real battleground of the 1940 campaign.

Within this area New York, latest and richest of the states in the matter of electoral votes, is leaning to the Democratic side at present by the tiny margin of 51-49. Nearby Pennsylvania, on the other hand, is leaning to the GOP by the same slight margin. Latest returns show Republican strength has increased in both these states in the past month.

Leaning Republican by a small margin are New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas. The Democrats are ahead in Indiana, Minnesota and Missouri. Political observers will be quick to note that — at the present time — the change of only a few states would give the Republican party the advantage.

GOP Wins

Only in the "solid South" have the Democrats been generally able to hold their party lines as well as they did in 1936. Here, in fact, Democratic strength is actually greater today than four years ago. But in the remaining 35 states there have been Republican gains as follows:

North Dakota, 25 points, Wisconsin, 23, Minnesota and Oregon, 16, Illinois, New Jersey and Idaho, 14, South Dakota, 13, Ohio, Michigan and Washington 12, Rhode Island, and Wyoming 11; California, Iowa, Kansas and Utah, 10; New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Nebraska, 9, Massachusetts, Montana and Nevada, 8, Maine and New Hampshire, 7, Indiana and Colorado, 6, New Mexico, 5, West Virginia, Vermont and Arizona, 4, Missouri 3, Delaware, 2 and Maryland 1.

Some evidence of these Republican gains have been available to political observers before this in sample itself. In the present survey the statistical probabilities are at least 95 in 100 that the average error per state resulting from the size of the sample will not exceed 4 per cent.

R. R. Rohde, principal of the Big Falls schools, is directing the play assisted by O. C. Handrich.

Actually, in 11 state surveys conducted by the Institute since the election of 1936 (the error from all causes (cross-section errors as well as errors due to size of sample) has averaged only 3 1/2 per cent.

Fishermen's Party Tickets Go on Sale Wednesday

Ducats Again Will Be Apportioned to Various CitiesPrice Is 55 Cents, Same
As Last Year Plus
Government TaxBY GORDON MCINTYRE THINGS are moving fast in connection with the Appleton Post-Crescent's fourth annual Fishermen's Party, very fast.Last week the two biggest announcements to date were made.
One was that there'd be a rowboat by the Brickyard Valley Marine Sales and Service company of Oshkosh and Neenah.Then on Saturday it was revealed there would be two motors offered. One is the big Evinrude Sportwin offered by Charles Pond of the Pond Sport Shop and the other a smaller motor, an Elito Pal, offered by the Appleton Post-Crescent and the Sport Shop.Of course everyone knew there'd be good prizes for this fourth annual party and the big question was "When are the tickets going on sale?"Tickets on Sale Wednesday Well, here's the news—they'll go on sale in Appleton and the circulation area of the Appleton Post-Crescent on Wednesday morning—1,946 of them, one for every seat in the Rialthea. As you know, the show is scheduled for Tuesday evening, May 7, just 11 days before the opening of the state's fishing season in almost all waters.As in the past, tickets have been apportioned the various cities, towns and villages. The list of outlets is in that 2-column box at the top of the next two columns. Each of the places has been given as many tickets as we can afford and still keep them well distributed. Also, the number is in proportion to the number moved in the various places last year.The price of the tickets this year is 55 cents, the same as a year ago excepting for an added tax which goes to Uncle Sam. It is in accord with the Post-Crescent's desire to give as good a party with as many prizes as is humanly possible. And those of you who remember last year's party will agree.At great expense the party again is being held in the Rialthea because it seats more people than other places in the city and because it can be sealed, each and everyone, in a most comfortable manner.
The evening's program hasn't been completed but it will be worth the price of admission, rest assured of that. And, if you happen to be lucky you'll get back a prize that will be worth more than the price of admission, many more times in the case of the motors, boats, rods, outings and such like.Don't Want to Buy And please, please, don't put off buying a ticket if you wish to go to the party. Every year we have hundreds of persons calling in who say they forgot and where can they get a ticket within 24 or 48 hours after the ticket sale opens you'll find getting a ticket is the hardest job around.The people in the units outside of Appleton are the biggest offenders on the waiting score and as a result Appleton people try to grab the duals by having a friend or relative get one or two or more.
They've learned that we caution the handlers of tickets outside of this city to sell only to those persons they know live in their community.The prize list is growing every day. Only a few of the local donors have been mentioned but there are plenty of them as you'll find by going further in this story.The Electric City Brewing company at Kaukauna has offered the party certificates for five cases of Mellow Brew. Regardless of what you say a case of Mellow Brew in the boat or car for a day's refreshment is something that tops off the day's activity. The fact the winners of these five gifts will receive a certificate means they do not have to use them until the proper occasion arises. Or you can have the beer for home usage, perhaps when someone comes over to eat a mess of fish or get the tackle box ready for the first venture.

Cities Service Oil

Cities Service Oil company appreciates that most fishing trips mean car trips and car trips often mean oil. So there'll be several cans of Cities Service oil again this year. Each can is five gallons, a complete change of oil for most of our cars. Coming at this time of the year it really means something.Oscar Kunitz, a fisherman from away back, is offering the party groups of free parking. They'll be

Team EventMADISON—(P)—Elmer Koch, a member of the Heil Quality Products team of Milwaukee, set a new all-events record in state bowling tournament competition yesterday with a nine game count of 2,052.It was the first all-time high score registered during the 38th annual meet. Bernie Soch, of Sheboygan, set the previous peak all-events marks of 2,018 in 1934.Koch rolled 684 in the doubles and 681 in the singles Saturday night. He paced his team with another smash of 687 yesterday.His doubles effort, combined with the 582 tallied by his partner, Charlie Daw, was good for third place in the regular doubles division.Koch's nine game count eclipsed the 1,972 series with which Sheriff Harry O'Brien of Jefferson county took the all-events lead last Wednesday.The Heil team, handicapped by 75 pins, collected a net of 2,928 which was not good enough to put it among the first five leaders.Other changes among leaders over the weekend included:The Straus Printers, of Madison, scored 3,027 with a 20 pin handicap to take second in the regular team division.Larry Troka and Andy Grill, of Milwaukee, moved into third place in regular doubles with a 1,263 lost.Stenz Olson, of Madison, tallied 669 to take third place in minor singles.The North Cape Inn team, of Milwaukee, battered down 2,706 pins for third in the junior team division.The Fran Kubly entry, of Monroe, annexed 2,870 for fourth in the minor regular bracket.

GLENN CUNNINGHAM FINISHES LAST IN 'FAREWELL' RACE

Glenn Cunningham, Kansas' favorite athletic son, said farewell to his racing career in the Kansas relays at Lawrence by finishing last in a special mile run. Shown coming into the stretch in the order in which they finished are Blaine Rideout, of North Texas Teachers, Wayne Rideout, Archie San Romani and Cunningham. The time was 4 minutes 10.1 seconds.

THE APPLETON BASEBALL CLUB is shaping up slowly but surely but like a huge mass of anything, it's rather hard to determine what kind of shape it will take. When you have 60 ball players batting, throwing, running and fielding and you hardly know Joe from Ed or Mike or Bill there's very little definite about the ball club.Saturday saw the infielders and outfielders join the 30 pitchers and catchers who have been here for a week. It also saw another ten boys out from the squad and there'll be another paring today.And how is it done? Well, we attended one of Manager Eddie Dancsak's meetings with his proteges Saturday evening at the Conway hotel annex, watched him work and watched him release some of the boys. He's sympathetic as all get out with the kids but he isn't afraid to tell them about their weaknesses.For instance, there was one lad from northern Michigan. He had arrived Saturday, a pitcher. But he hadn't thrown a ball this winter.
His answer was that there was snow up north. And Dancsak came back that he should have been throwing indoors, then.There were several other lads who were too old. Eddie told them that if they were 23 and hadn't been in class ball then they shouldn't start. No player should be around Class D ball for more than two or three years. If he hasn't moved up in that time he should find a job and go to work.And, he also warned, don't try to fake an age. Someone will check the birth records and the fellow who lied won't be around long.Other boys are let go after watching them throw a ball. Others after watching them bat and stand at the plate. It isn't hard to draw conclusions when you watch a hitter as against some of the boys who go up and hope. And size also counts. A puny infielder hasn't a chance with a stocky fellow with legs like the oldtime pianos.The Saturday and Sunday drills were long and rather hard. There isn't a diamond available but the boys worked on everything except trying to field rollers. Today the squad is scheduled to use Inter-lake park diamond for infield drills and when they start scooping grounders another group of boys will show their weaknesses. Then they'll be on their way.But it won't be long, now. Every day will bring the situation closer to a climax and before the week is over that 60 fellows who worked out before large crowds Saturday and Sunday will be cut to 40 or maybe to 30. After all, it costs a heap o' money to keep the boys who are on contract.Friday the squad is scheduled to work at Little Chute in one of the many out-of-town drills that have been arranged.And speaking of baseball: Those schedules which you see around Appleton are schedules and nothing more. They indicate the date on which the games will be played. The mention of only two night games is a misnomer. The teams—all of them—will play as much night ball as is possible. The first warm breezes will bring announcement that the games will go under lights.What's this about Hunter Lake, Appleton hurler, getting ready for the opening of the baseball season by casting in the Atlantic street ravine?Ripon college, which won the Midwest conference football and basketball titles this year, is aroued. Ripon doesn't go in much for minor sports whereas Beloit and some of the other schools do. So, when Beloit college paper recently summarized all sports in the conference and showed where Carleton was tops and Beloit second and Ripon trailed, Clem Luck Ripon college publicity expert and conductor of a column in one of the Ripon's weekly papers, got mad.
His comment follows:"A story in a recent issue of the Beloit College Round Table has caused some amusement and a little ire around here.
It purports to give the rating to date for the 'All-Around Sports Championship' of the Midwest conference. Based on an elaborate point system, with credit given for victories in football, cross country, basketball, wrestling and swimming victories, Carleton is credited with the lead and Be-loft estimated as pressing closely in second, but one point behind."Coach Doebling informs us that no such all-around championship is officially sanctioned by the conference. It was discussed by league officials some years ago, was never adopted."The Round Table in which the story appears, has been published as a special issue for prospective Beloit college students. It doesn't appeal to this writer as exactly cricket to give high school athletes the impression which Beloit is obviously seeking to create."If any college is to exercise the prerogative of setting up an 'All-Around Sports Championship,' Ri-pon could organize a very nice rating system of its own, designed to tell the world that the Redmen top them all. Forgetting for the moment, Ripon's bona fide co-championship in football last fall, and its undisputed second consecutive title in basketball this winter, a questionable business of insinuating a sports leadership according to one's own notions, on bases which are not conference sanctioned, de-barmington, ping pong, paddle tennis, handball and a few other things. We don't have a polo team as yet, but some of the boys could claim a few percentage points for their brilliant horsemanship while riding down Lover's lane with their girl friends on rented horse-flesh from the local stables."We have no quarrel with the high lighting of so-called minor sports. They, too, are important and might well be given some official league recognition. But this questionable business of insinuat-
ing a sports leadership according to

serves an airing."AS THE CHIMES OF DISTANT BELLS...

CHICAGO—(P)—The University of Chicago, subject of a whispering campaign ever since intercollegiate football was abandoned, is still in there pitching for the remainder of its sports program.President Robert M. Hutchins told the athletic directors of the Big Ten yesterday what he had said and what he had not said about intercollegiate football at Chicago and elsewhere, clearing the air of many charges and counter charges.After Chicago explained its position, the athletic directors voted unanimously to give the midway institution a place on their basketball schedules for the season of 1940-41.
To have declined to schedule the Maroons would have meant virtual ostracism from the circuit.The directors, in a meeting March 9, refused to complete the basketball schedules until they heard from Chicago. Some of them plainly were miffed over remarks attributed to high Chicago officials. An "unknown spokesman" for the trustees had been quoted in the newspapers as saying a winning football team could not be produced in the Big Ten without cheating the rules.The directors asked if this sentiment was expressed by a school official and, if so, that the institution either offer proof of rules violations or apologize.Metal Answers
A letter from Hutchins, presented to the directors yesterday by T. Nelson Metcalf, Chicago's athletic director, said:"On the subject of subsidization in the Big Ten I have said in public and private only this: 'To achieve the peculiar advantages of winning football, the University of Chicago must, under its conditions, subsidize players.' The intercollegiate conference (Big Ten) has a sweeping rule forbidding subsidization. The university does not want winning football at the cost of violating that rule."Directors deferred drawing up schedules in any other sports until their next meeting May 24-25 during the outdoor track meet at Northwestern University. The directors awarded the 1941 indoor track meet

Bits About Bowling

Editor's note: H. M. Pankratz, "Hooks" for short, president of the Appleton Bowling association, winds up this column as guest conductor. Any similarity between persons mentioned in this column and real people, living or dead, is purely coincidental.

BY H. M. PANKRATZ

It won't be long new before another bowling season is put on the shelf. In the opinion of most of the old timers and alley managers about town, it has been the best season in the history of Appleton Bowling.

As for the City tournament—well, as Al Smith would say, let's have a look at the records. And when you set records, it means teamwork and cooperation. And, believe me, we have had just exactly that. Every one from the bowling editor of the Appleton Post-Crescent, Dick Davis, down to the pin boys in this tournament has done his share. If we were to start thanking all the deserving ones, it would take too much space. Naturally all the bowlers participating in the tournament get a pat on the back.

Then all the secretaries and officials of the various leagues who attended the meetings on Sunday mornings to organize the tourney come in for special praise. Special mention goes to Bob Nehls, secretary of the Builders league. His league consists of 16 teams and Bob brought in and laid down the entry money for 15 of them, in addition to five more.

He is picked up from several other leagues. He, I believe, was the only secretary to submit a complete record of his league's averages, number of games rolled and total number of pins. What's more, it was in alphabetical order. Not only that—one could actually find Bob down at the Elks alleys marking score.

S. Timmers of the Knights of Columbus league brought in 16 out of 20 teams and Ray Weber of the City Major circuit did a good job in reporting his circuit 100 per cent. The Tap-A-Keg bunch also was 100 per cent. No use to mention "Kelly" Weller. Everybody knows Kelly is a detail man. He has more records than the social security department. He has everything down for every bowler in his league for the last 3 years except the weather on the night they bowled. Maybe that's an idea, Kelly! Some of the boys might stay home on those wet nights and boost their averages.

I wonder if anybody had a more severe test of patience than Aaron "Bones" Gehring, who had charge of the schedule. He deserves a lot of credit for a fine job, overlooking, of course, time out for celebrating the winning of the state Elks doubles championship along with William Jacobson, another good tournament worker. We think "Bones" is well qualified as a first class traffic manager.

We know what a tireless worker Brother Lou Powers is. Several times it looked as though he would be snowed under but he always came up smiling. Our greatest worry was that in keeping him tied down so much he couldn't find time to get that new car broken in. Incidentally, that wasn't so good for the rest of the family because Brother Powers does all the breaking in PERSONALLY, while the rest of the family walks.

Then, of course, the worthy vice president, R. E. Schmidt, has put so much time in on this tourney he looks like a stranger at home. But he is being pretty much of a home man, giving the family some enjoyment when they see him take a few nights out. Then there are George Schuessler and Fred Bendt who are always on the job in the interest of better bowling and shouldered much of the work. We could hardly pass up Hugh Brinkman, who was perhaps No. 1 score-marker.

No other sporting event attracted so much attention during the last two months than did the City bowling tourney. The sad thing was that a great number of doubles and singles keggers missed the boat in failing to file their entries before the closing date. In conforming with A. B. C. regulations, we turned down enough entries after the closing date to make a nice little tournament in itself.

Who got off to a start in the tournament with more bum luck than our own Dick Davis? Imagine Dick pouring that reverse cannon ball in the old 1-3 (or 1-2) pocket and turning up with four splits in the first three frames. As we always said, in bowling there is no justice. After dishing it out all season, I wonder how Dick likes to be on the receiving end???

Who was the hero of the first annual tournament? None other than that great enthusiast Walt Hughes. He went into first place in all events on a 7 o'clock shift and visualized a spot in his store window for that Post-Crescent all-events trophy.

Instead of celebrating his achievement, however, he volunteered to mark score for Clarence "Sonny" Tornow on the next shift. In an ironic payoff, "Sonny" nosed out Walt for top total. When the news was spread around that "Sonny" was first in the all-events, it was pretty well agreed by everybody concerned that that trophy, Tornow is just about tops in bowling and all-around good sport. He would have been the first to shake the hand of the winner if it would have been somebody else. Walt, incidentally, was the first to shake hands with "Sonny."

And speaking of champions, who is it that is state champ but doesn't know the rules? Ask George Hogreiver, the Elks' tryer who always has a cheerful little carful, he knows—

To those who didn't get in on the prize money, we hope you had fun and enjoyed the tournament. Adopt the philosophy advanced by Oscar Kunitz, Oscar, of his own admission, doesn't care to have a high average, he doesn't care to win a game or not, he would just as soon be in last place as first. What Oscar really strives for is form. And, of course, we agree pretty well on one thing, Oscar is in a class by himself.

All of which brings to light the story back of the headlines in a Hot Springs newspaper published during his stay there this winter. They read—"Oscar Kunitz hits 257." When they really were hollering about was after two months' strict diet and 5 or 6 baths a day, they finally brought his weight down to 257.

Here and there — Ed Stenard, captain of that great Jenss Clothiers quint, says it was the best tournament he ever bowled in, including the A. B. C. . . Jim Nolan, captain of Nolan Insurance, promises "We will be in again next year."

J. Marx has copyrighted a delayed pitch. . . Bob Schmidt says the biggest upset of the bowling season was the sight of Stenard breaking down after 20 years abstinence from "that stuff" . . . Reports from the Merchants league banquet indicate that as a bowler Dr. C. L. Kolb makes a good toast-master. . . Melvin Schneider rolled 517 series in the City tourney and then went over to the Ardmore and jarred a 739 series, the highest recorded in Appleton this year.

Roely Johnson scored the highest and lowest games of the tournament, at the time he rolled, when he jammed a 287 and dribbled a 109. . . Al Jenss relieved the strain on that rubber band at one of the league banquets. . .

There's only 5.45 pins difference between the averages of Navy bowlers, winners of the Eastern Elks league. . . Mabel Rose hasn't missed a league night in 11 years of bowling at the Elks. . . Elynn's Beauty Shop won three games during initial matches this season and didn't win another set of three until the final night. . . Dixie Stark collected 143 and 143 and another 143 while rolling in the Women's Tri-City tournament now underway at Menasha.

Kansas City Five Rolls 3,003 Total In ABC Tourney

Its Good for Second; Chicago Duo Grabs First In Doubles

DETROIT — From now on out, it's going to be tough on the keggers who try to wedge their way into leadership in the American Bowling Congress.

Fifteen days remain of the annual pin classic, but the great majority of favored teams already have had their chances on the tournament alleys and the scores while not of record-breaking caliber, are good enough that many of them may stand.

None of the teams scheduled on the Sunday evening card came close to the performance of the Rosendale Club, of Kansas City, Kan., who rolled 3,003 in Saturday's late shift. The Rosendale outfit's score was the second to pass the 3,000 mark and took second place behind the 3,047 rolled by the Monarch Beer quint of Chicago.

Herb Freitag and Joe Sinke, of Chicago, created the other sensation of the weekend when they hit 1,346 for top spot in the doubles.

Thomas' Sprint Brings First at Six-Day Race

Pittsburgh — Bobby Thomas, of Kenosha, Wis., and Jimmy Walters stole a lap in the last 15 minutes to win the six-day bicycle races at Duquesne Gardens Saturday night.

Six teams rode on even terms entering the last hour of the grind. Then Thomas cut loose in a surprise spurt. The winners finished with only 640 points.

Feller Is Driven Off Mound; Tigers Tip Indians, 12-2

Schoolboy Rowe Winning Hurler; Dizzy Dean Is Also Chased

By the Associated Press
AMERICAN league batsmen can breathe easier today. Bobby Feller's only human after all. Rated off his performance in whitewashing the White Sox with a no-hitter opening day, plus the knowledge that his blinding speed is matched by newly acquired baseball cunning, the outlook was anything but bright for the hapless hurler. But he lasted only three innings yesterday as the Detroit Tigers rapped him solidly for six hits and an ultimate 12-2 victory.

The 21-year-old phenom was greeted with a double from the bat of Barney McCosky, first Tiger to face him, and that was all the Tigers needed. They went to work with a vengeance and finally drove him from the mound with a five run out.

Schoolboy Rowe went the distance for the Tigers and allowed but five hits. The White Sox, victims of the Feller fireball last Tuesday, finally recovered enough to stage a batting spree for a 6-2 victory over the St. Louis Browns. It was the first time in three tries that the Sox have won.

Lyons Gives 7 Hits
White Ted Lyons, the ageless veteran, was holding the Browns to seven hits, the Sox socked Slick Coffman around unmercifully, getting all their blows off him. After putting the game away safely in the sixth with a three run outburst, the Chicagoans were held hitless the rest of the way by some nice relief hurling by Johnny Niggeling.

The Browns opened with a run in each of the first two innings but Joe Kuhel's second homer in two days with one man on base accounted for the tying run in the third.

A one-two double and single by Eric McNair and Mike Tresh gave the Sox another run in the fourth, then they put the game on ice with two doubles, a sacrifice, a pass ball and two singles for the tie scores in the sixth.

In the only other game played in the majors, the St. Louis Cardinals greeted their former hurler, Dizzy Dean warmly—too warmly, in fact, for the perennial pop-off, who was blasted off the mound in the fifth as the Cards won a 5-4 thriller from the Cubs.

The Redbirds were helpless in the first three frames, the great one's "nothing ball" offering nothing more substantial than a shadow to swing at. But trouble loomed just ahead and the Cards tied the count at 2-2, thanks to some bad Cub mishaps, in the fourth.

The fifth started with successive singles by Max Lanier, Stu Martin, Johnny Mize and Don Padgett. Dean, with nothing better to do, headed for the showers. Charley Root taking over in time to see the winning runs come in.

Otherwise the weather man got another clean sweep, raining out what should have been the series finale in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Brooklyn in the National league, and Boston and New York in the American.

Infield Collision Costs Brewers Game With Toledo

TOLEDO —(P)—Two Milwaukee players collided in trying to field a ninth-inning infield fly with the bases loaded, and an alert Toledo runner crossed the plate with the run that gave the Mudhens a 3 to 2 victory over the Brewers yesterday.

With one out, Milt Byrnes of Toledo lifted a towering pop-fly. When Catcher Garback and third baseman Charlie English collided, the ball trickled away, and Tony Criscola who had been on third base, scampered in with the deciding tally.

Under the infield fly rule, the batter automatically would have been out regardless of whether the ball had been caught.

Les Wikkala held the Brewers to seven scattered hits, Les Powell home run accounting for one Milwaukee score.

Bob Kline, heavyweight right-handed of the Brewers, wrenched a knee fielding a roller in the seventh and left the game. The Mudhens tied the score off Roogie Bill Hawley in the eighth, and Buck Marrow was the victim of the ninth inning mixup.

Kansas City and Minneapolis, the one-two teams in last season's American association title scramble, already have made it clear they don't intend to rest on their laurels.

Both team uncovered sparkling hurlers new to the league yesterday, each rookie winning his game in brilliant fashion.

Milt Haefner, 27-year-old hurler who won 24 and lost 9 for Deland, Fla., last year, wielded only four hits in 11 innings. Harry Smythe took over at that point and pitched hitless ball for five more frames before Minneapolis could squeeze out a 3 to 0 triumph over Indianapolis in 16 innings.

Kansas City's newest rookie prize in Charles Wensloff, 23-year-old right-hander who won 26 and lost 4 for Joplin in the Western association in 1939. Wensloff cut Columbus down with two hits yesterday, including a home run by pitcher Frank Melton. The final score was 9 to 4. Jack Sturm and Gerald Priddy contributed homers for the defending champions.

St. Paul rode to a 6 to 1 victory over Louisville on the veteran Art Herring's six-hit pitching. George Stumpf led the attack with four hits.

Riggs' Wife Defends His Play Against Lesser Lights
HOUSTON, TEXAS —(P)—Presenting the case of the spectators versus Bobby Riggs, and vice versa:
For the spectator—
The little 22-year-old Chicagoan, world amateur champion of tennis, is possibly one of the most intensely disliked players—by competitors as well as public—in the history of sport.
Most galleries would love nothing more than to see Riggs beaten in love sets—beaten so badly that no memory of his magnificent game remained.
Riggs is too great a player to let that happen. He generally is equal to the occasion. Yesterday, tired by deprecatory press notices, he blasted Betsy Grant of Atlantic off the court in straight sets, 7-5, 6-3, 7-5, to win the River Oaks invitation tournament.
In the early matches of a tournament, Riggs slouches around, exerting himself just enough to win. He may drive his opponent to the point of exasperation by casually bouncing the ball as he saunters to the baseline. Or he may stop and chat with some bystander while his red-faced enemy is waiting.
For Riggs—
Let his wife, a sparkling-eyed 21-year-old girl who knows Bobby better, possibly, than he does himself, speak:
"Bobby is not a strong-armed player. He's a little fellow, and if he drove himself all week when he didn't have to he'd be washed out by the time he reached the finals.
He builds himself to a peak.
"Bobby doesn't like to beat those poorer players he sets. He prefers to encourage the young players who are on the way up.
"You must admit this—he always plays to win."
You be the judge.

Badgers, Illinois Tied for First in Baseball Standings

Have Won Three and Lost One; Badgers Meet Hawkeyes Next

CHICAGO —(P)—Illinois and Wisconsin lost a game apiece in the Big Ten baseball race last week, but they're still riding the crest as competition goes into the third week.

The co-leaders each split two-game series, enabling them to remain a half game ahead of Iowa, defending champion.

The Hawkeyes take on Wisconsin at Madison Friday and Saturday in the featured set-to of the weekend. Illinois broke even with the Hawks last week, Harold Haub pitching the champions to a 7-4 victory in the first tilt and Al Grant pacing the Illini's 4-3 decision in the second contest. Haub's triumph was his sixth straight in the conference this season and last.

Illinois will be going after its fourth and fifth victories this week in a two-game series with Ohio State at Columbus.

Iowa, Wisconsin was dealing a similar hand with Michigan. The Wolverines whipped the Badgers, 5 to 2 in the Friday engagement and the visitors snapped back with a 5-3 decision in the second tussle.

In the only other contest Northwestern thrashed Chicago twice, 12 to 9 and 9 to 3. This enabled the Wildcats to climb into fourth place with a .500 rating while Chicago still is victoryless in four games.

Indiana-Purdue and Ohio State-Minnesota were rained out, leaving all but Purdue still without an engagement within the circuit.

The weekend schedule also pits Purdue against Chicago on the midway and Michigan against Indiana at Bloomington. Minnesota has a pair of non-conference tilts scheduled with Luther and Northwestern meets Notre Dame Friday and Saturday.

Could Have Won Hand by Spade Play

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Many a player would groan less away from the bridge table if he thought more while sitting at it. South played today's hand badly, yet instead of acknowledging that fact, he complained that the odds favored his line of play by three to one. Even this, however, was not a very reasonable ground for complaint when it is considered that his contract was iron-clad by another line of play.

One bidding:
South West North East
1 spade Pass 2 hearts Pass
2 no trump Pass 3 no trump Pass
Pass Pass

West opened the jack of diamonds and South won with the queen. Declarer could count five tricks in the minor suits, and saw that if either heart honor were in West's hand, four more tricks could be obtained in the heart suit. The odds were three to one that West would have at least one of the two outstanding honors.

Without thinking any further about the hand, South immediately led the nine of hearts and let it ride. East won and returned a diamond. South took another heart finesse and this also lost.

The result is only too easy to see. Declarer made only three heart tricks and his five tricks in the minor suits, and the defenders made five tricks with ease.

South should have seen that against any division of cards he was sure of making three tricks in the spade suit, the ace of hearts and the five tops in the minor suits. He should not have touched the heart suit at all, but should have gone right after the spades.

He still had two stoppers in the minor suits and, according to his own view, had nothing much to fear in hearts. A three to one shot is good enough when nothing better offers, but it should not be preferred to an absolutely certain line of play.

THE HOME GARDENER

by EDWIN H. PERKINS

This is your last chance to plant trees, shrubs and kindred material sold in a dormant state. Unlike evergreens and other plants sold with balled and burlapped roots, this dormant material is shipped with bare roots which must be gotten into the ground before the plants begin active growth.

As soon as the plant material is received, it should be planted without delay. If the roots are dry, soak them in a bucket of water for a day or two, or better still, bury them in wet soil for the same length of time. Dig generous holes for the plants, each hole large enough so that, when replanted, the specimens will rest an inch or two lower in the soil than when they stood in the nursery row.

When making the excavation, pile the good top soil to one side, poor subsoil on the other, and loosen the subsoil when it is very hard.

Place the bare rooted plant in the excavation, open the roots and fill in with good top soil. Tamp this down with a stick or something so that no open spaces remain. Use the poor topsoil which can be lightened by the addition of one-third its bulk in humus, until the hole is nearly filled. Then tamp thoroughly, compacting the soil as much as possible. Fill the excavation with water. After the water has drained away, mulch around the top so as to retard evaporation. Remove, by pruning, at least one-third of the branches. This lessens the plant's burden in reestablishing itself.

My Neighbor Says—

Roses demand plenty of drainage. Add gravel or cinders to the soil in which they are planted if the soil is very heavy and drainage is poor. Put about 18 inches of good soil over this with plenty of fertilizer in the bottom and loam on top.

Freeze a can of fruit in your mechanical refrigerator. Put the can itself in the freezing compartment or empty its contents into a freezing tray. Let stand for 4 hours. Serve as dessert.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

Vanity is normal for healthy women. This proud beauty carries her head with regal grace and keeps her makeup in meticulous order.

If you will be limber, graceful and compellingly poised go to the zoo and watch the panther, deer and peacock. Is the advice of a leading New York beauty authority. In her famous salon, women are instructed how to become limber and graceful by performing exercises inspired by the natural movements of these zoo animals.

For the suppleness of the panther, with every muscle coordinating with one's will, the following stretching movements are suggested. They encourage cat-like precision and grace.

1—Lie on your back, raise your legs and try to reach your toes with your fingertips by stretching slowly. Do this ten times.

2—Sit up with your hands behind your hips, and stretch the knees from side to side ten times.

3—From a standing position stretch the left leg and left arm, trying to make the left side of the body longer than the right. Alternate and repeat six times.

Deer Teaches Us These
The soft, frightened movements of the forest pet which takes leaping jumps and graceful springs, inspires a simple routine to acquire freedom of movement.

1—Run across the room, bringing your feet high off the floor, toes pointed sharply downward and body held straight.

2—Stretch your arms upward, turn the hips quickly from side to side, bending your knees slightly. Repeat five times.

3—Kick your feet up in back with sharp knee bends, trying to reach the small of your back with the tips of your toes.

The proud queen of the feathered family teaches us how to master poise. With a mirror in hand, the instructress performs rhythmic exercises depicting the pride and vanity of the peacock.

She suggests that hostesses in receiving lines might well take lessons from this bird. Its regal carriage can be emulated by practicing the following routine.

1—Stretch your arms overhead, and walk with grace on the tips of your toes, keeping your back in good posture. Relax and walk around the room again. Repeat ten times each morning.

2—With arms stretched overhead, bend your knees slowly until you are sitting on your heels. Stand erect again and repeat exercise ten times.

3—Rise up on your toes, drop your arms to your sides allowing them to hang relaxed, then stretch them as though they were the wings of a peacock. Upward and backward. Do this several times.

Learn Routine
To master grace and poise quickly, learn these exercises by heart and go through the entire sequence to the tune of soft music.

And for added beauty spend hours out in the fresh air and sunshine. Belle Beautiful you will be!

My leaflet "Slumber Inducing Exercises" suggest more movements to acquire grace. If you request it, write me care of this paper and enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope to cover mailing costs.

Few Look Upon Childhood as Joyous, Carefree Time of Life

BY DOROTHY DIX

Even childhood is being debunked in these hard-boiled days, and the myth that it is the happiest time of life has gone into the discard along with George Washington's little hatchet and the boy who saved the dikes in Holland by thrusting his arm into the leak. Scientists, who are trying to establish what is the happiest time of life, have recently questioned four thousand people about it and not one of them had ever experienced the joyous, carefree childhood of which we have heard so much and personally known so little. On the contrary, every one of them remembered it as a time when they suffered from nameless fears and apprehensions, when life was full of frustrations, when their egos were always raw and bleeding and when every trivial disappointment seemed a major catastrophe. In a word, childhood lives in a world with which it is unable to cope, and that, I think, is the experience of even fortunate children.

Looking back, most of us recall the black despair that filled our whole horizons if on the day of the picnic it rained, and how we felt that we might just as well die and be done with it, since there was nothing else in life worth living for. We relive again the fury of balked ambition that tore our souls when we failed to get the school prize, and how we bedewed our pillows with tears when Johnny Jones walked home from the party with Sally Smith instead of us.

Nothing could move us that way now. Not the loss of a fortune. Not to be defeated for governor. Not to be compelled to be turned back from the gangplank as we were starting on a joyride around the world. Not to have our back rejected, or our play prove a failure, or for the government to veto our bank merger.

We have learned that if it storms today, tomorrow will be glad weather and that picnics are messy affairs anyway. If we didn't carry off the first prize, we got the consolation one. And we have learned that the day when we thanked our heavenly stars that we missed getting Johnny Jones and got Tommy Smith instead.

So nothing fills us with despair any more, because we know that nothing is final. There is always tomorrow. There is always another chance. Also, age, which takes the keenest edge off of enjoyment, likewise dulls the capacity for suffering.

Thumps of playful healthy children. Unless that is done the children suffer a grave injustice and their growth is made at its best.

Little children, those under nine or thereabout, ought not to be asked to wear house manners too long at a time. The strain of being polite before guests is too severe and it is likely to bring on the giggles, or show-off spree, very embarrassing to everybody concerned. Let them appear, make their bows, and disappear. Make allowances for their childish natures and needs.

A quiet house, a quiet schoolroom, are essential to the health of the children and the grown people who occupy them. Set the atmosphere for that and the children will respond to the quiet as quickly as they do to the noise. Talking about it will not be necessary.

Mr. Patrl will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane

Psychologist, Northwestern University

Modern emphasis on vocational guidance is producing injurious effects as well as much good. The harm comes when thousands of people listlessly sit around waiting for some master mind to pick out their "one and only" job, instead of resolutely taking whatever they can get. Paste this Case Record in your scrapbook and be sure you get a copy of my Vocational Guidance Chart.

CASE Q-143: George K., aged 35, is a distinguished looking Greek. "I came to see you for vocational advice," he spoke pleasantly.

"My experience has been varied. After graduating from high school in Chicago, I became manager of a theater.

"Then I shifted to sales work, and three years ago I was persuaded into taking over a job as manager of facts into consideration. What are George's chief talents?

How To Pick Your Job
He has the looks, bearing and good English of a polished executive. For 15 years he has handled people with at least reasonable success. He has demonstrated his executive ability by holding good jobs throughout the depression.

His background, therefore, qualified him for work which involves dealing with people. This is a fine talent and one which, unfortunately, no college course deals with. You develop it chiefly by experience with life.

George should continue merchandising this major talent, for his livelihood and then indulge his mechanical interests as a hobby. In fact, many of our greatest engineering inventions have been made by self-educated men, such as Ford and Edison.

George can still enjoy mechanics and him for work with a dime for inventions by putting around in his basement laboratory. It isn't essential that we pick as a lifetime vocation a job of which we are so enamored that we compose love ballads about it.

Punching a time clock will never give you the ecstatic, pulse-pounding sensations of kissing your sweetheart, despite the erroneous belief today that people should fall in love with their jobs.

Secrets Of Vocational Guidance
Too many young people today are lazily waiting for somebody to analyze them and tell them the one and only job for which they were created.

First, there is no "one and only" job. You are fitted for many types of work. Besides, there is no innate love for any kind of work. You can learn to enjoy any job fairly well if you become reasonably proficient therein, and find that it provides you a comfortable livelihood.

Earn your money from your job, and then indulge your secret interests as a hobby. The chief principle of vocational guidance is this: "Take the best job available. Perform it to the best of your ability. But keep your eye open for better jobs in the future."

The latter sentence involves night study or correspondence courses by which you acquire new abilities which you can use for procuring better positions.

Send me a long, stamped self-addressed envelope with a dime for printing costs if you wish my "VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE CHART."

Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and a dime for printing costs. You will receive your self-addressed envelope and one of his psychological charts.

LEAP BEFORE YOU LOOK

By Peggy O'More

YESTERDAY: At Abe's suggestion Toml advertises for a rancidologist. A young man named Pierre Prudhomme arrives without writing just as Allen is giving a party for Toml.

Chapter 12
"A MAN FOR YOU"
HEN Pierre appeared with Lily. He had discarded his coat and tie, and someone had wrapped his head in a brigand's scarlet kerchief. Toml marveled at the ease with which he had adapted himself to the group.

"Miss Mankin tells me she was rude to you the first time you met, and now she wants to apologize," he said.

And again Toml must comply, graciously. "I wasn't exactly friendly," she conceded.

Lily smiled and Toml discovered a most provocative dimple. The girl was pretty. She wanted to like her.

"Weren't we funny?" she asked, laughing, and Toml suddenly saw the ridiculous side of their meeting.

"I had you pictured as a dried-up spinster," Lily explained, "and here you turned out to be young and lovely. You were an awful disappointment."

Toml laughed with her. "Timothy was my GREAT-uncle, you know."

And then the crowd descended upon them.

"This will never do," cried a red-head called Myrtle. "You must have smut on your face before you are branded as one of the gang. Come on and turn the pork chops."

Toml turned pork chops, eyes fixed with smoke from the open fireplace, hair tousled from the low-hanging cedar boughs. There was smut on her face and grease stains on her new frock, but she was happy. She had never been so happy.

The crowd liked her. She could tell by the way they teased her, scolded her, and ordered her around. When they had settled around the pit for lunch, they included her in their future plans.

"We'll have to find a man for you," decided Myrtle.

"She has one!" Bartell spoke with a finality that caused Toml's breath to catch. He was looking at her as though he detested her. Surely he didn't think she knew Prudhomme well enough to single him out.

"He's one fellow," Bartell went on, "who is going to handle her as she needs to be handled. Hell, knock that temper out of her if he has to use a baying pin. And when he's through with his disciplining, she'll sit up and beg."

Toml looked at Bartell and hated him anew. There he sat, sun shining down on him as though it had been made for the sole purpose of bringing out the highlights in his hair, the bronze of his skin, the tendril glints in his eyes, and to illuminate that slow, lazy smile.

Then she looked at Prudhomme and was surprised at what she saw. There was nothing impersonal in that glance. It was grave, serious, considering.

The crowd waited. Toml elevated a bun with a pork chop protruding at a rakish angle. "If this fellow has a sister, see if she'll take you in hand," she suggested.

While the group hooted at Bartell, Toml enjoyed the sandwich, salad, and cedar needles. Nothing had ever tasted as delicious.

"My dear," Myrtle swooped down on her, "you're going dancing with us tonight. You're too good to lose. Imagine any girl holding her own with Allen Pierre, you can be my man for the evening, and I'll lend Jack to Toml."

Pierre sprang to his feet and hurried to Toml. "But, if Miss Toland will be so kind—"

Toml flashed him a look of gratitude and turned to Myrtle. "That's sweet of you, dear, but I'm so poor at returning anything I borrow."

And on this high note of laughter Toml returned to the farm.

"Stern Parent"
Abe liked Prudhomme. He was as enthusiastic as his lack of teeth would allow. "I tell you, Miss Toland, I wouldn't put it past him to grow up as a five-legged frog."

"Quint's or nothing," agreed Toml, and fled upstairs.

What should she wear? Toml tried on each frock she had purchased, while Abe waited at the foot of the stairs to pass judgment. She was wearing pink tulle over American beauty taffeta when Allen appeared.

"You look like the pink stuff they sell at the circus," he said. Toml stiffened.

"Oh, I didn't mean lemonade," he corrected. "I meant the stuff that looks like spun sugar. And if it will help you any, the girls are wearing semi-formals tonight. Myrtle said to tell you," he added hastily.

"Is that what inspired this visit?" Toml inquired.

Allen waited until Old Abe, sensing a storm brewing, shuffled out of the house.

"No, it isn't. Who is this Prudhomme person?"

Toml's cheeks were as pink as her frock. "And may I ask if you've suddenly assumed the role of the stern parent?"

Bartell sank into a chair, his long frame folding like a jack-knife. "Someone should," he grumbled.

dark prophecies unfulfilled and the world go on its accustomed way after so many predictions that the end was about to occur. He has seen the deluge peter out so often into a mild and beneficent shower.

It is youth that despairs and ends a life he finds intolerable, because it cannot believe that a dawn will rise on its black hour. Old age knows better. It knows that the sunrise has never failed us yet and that after sorrow comes rejoicing.

So age is a time of calm philosophy, whatever the best. It is when the clock strikes 12 that we know most surely that "God reigns in His heaven and all is well with the world."

TWO VERSIONS

BY ANNE ADAMS

Practical prettiness is the keynote of this kitchen newcomer, Pattern 4394, by Anne Adams. The smooth paneled lines are interrupted at either side by curved seams that make for perfect fit. An ingenious back arrangement keeps the straps up on your shoulders. Just see how well the skirt is cut, almost meeting in back to make your frock shadow-proof on warm, without-a-slip days. The front panel may be in bright contrast for color. Version A shows the top cut into decorative points and the whole panel gayly framed by ruffling. Apron B has a rounded top and ric-rac trim.

Pattern 4394 is available in sizes small, medium and large. Small size, view A, takes 2 yards 35 inch fabric and 23 yards ruffling, view B, 2 yards 35 inch fabric.

napkins (12 alike, 8 alike and 8 others alike). Could I get small paper plates and paper napkins so as to provide a sufficient supply for every one?"

You need not worry about plates and napkins to be stacked in layers, which are characteristic of the small table in the living-room, at which you yourself sit and pour. At a large table, where the dining-room table is set quite differently from the small everyday table, plates and napkins are seldom arranged in layered stacks and there are never more than a dozen or so napkins for as many as a hundred guests. At your table, therefore, three stacks of 8 plates each and four small groups of napkins, one of 8 and three of 6, will be ample if you choose typical cakes and sandwiches. Both these are small and dry and easily held in the hand, or laid on the edge of the saucer of the teacup, and few people find neither napkin or plate necessary. At everyday tea, all sorts of hot breads or buttered muffins with jam or marmalade or cream-ozing cakes are utterly delectable but most difficult to eat—unless almost as many implements are supplied as would set a dinner table.

Who Buys Hope Chest?
Dear Mrs. Post: Is it a breach of etiquette for a man to give his bride a hope chest? "Hope chest" is a large term, and may be permitted to buy glassware and other gifts to add to the pieces the girl has begun to collect for their future home?

Answer: It would not be considered a breach of present-day etiquette for him to buy the "hope chest." In former times, the bride's family was supposed to buy and furnish almost all the household necessities, as well as the "hope chest." Today the bridegroom-to-be often as not buys the chest and takes a great interest in buying things for their future home. He does not, however, buy any of her personal trousseau.

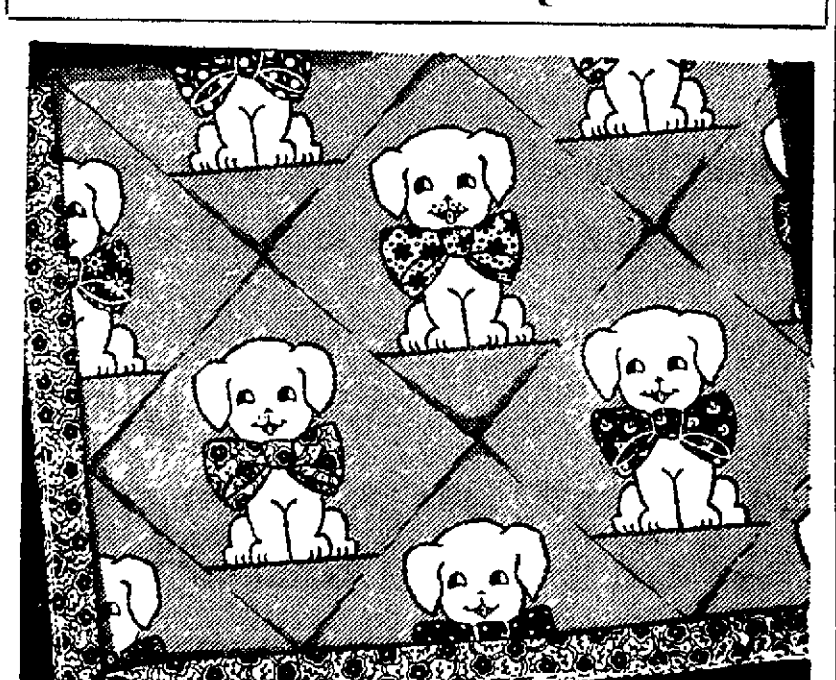

Serving Cocktails in Living-Room
Dear Mrs. Post: Is it suitable to serve tomato juice or fruit juice cocktails in the living-room before dinner? The way alcoholic drinks are served with canapés? This would ordinarily be the first course at the meal, which I prepare and have to serve myself, and serving it this way in the living-room by my husband would mean that dinner could begin with the main course.

Answer: Yes, of course. Tomato and fruit juice cocktails may be served with canapés in the living-room before dinner just exactly as the stronger ones are. Even when there should be an alternate choice of something non-alcoholic.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad, however, to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "Cocktails." Be sure to send a three-cent, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post in care of this paper, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y.

Miami Paper Hops Pegler for "Discovering" City's Crime

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER
New York—My vaunted client, the Miami Herald, has hailed me before the bar of local opinion for discovering, year after year that the criminal scum of northern cities move into that community and ply their various nefarious trades. I am accused of failure to perceive the beauties of the place and sense the gaiety of the carefree throngs of well-behaved Americans, who outnumbered the truly bad a thousand to one.

In reply may I say that I have often attempted to describe the richness of the scene and to give proper recognition to those daring doers who created on that risky strip between the glades and the mangrove tangles of the beach a pleasure land without a rival, in certain respects, anywhere on earth. Miami has now become a real city and an important port for travel and commerce by air and sea, and appreciation of that fact suggests to me that the two daily newspapers, the Herald, and the Daily News, owned by Jimmy Cox, former governor of Ohio and once the Democratic nominee for President, have not grown with the town.

There is nothing wrong with the Miami as to crime civic corruption and official negligence or connivance that could not be cured by these two papers or either of them, if the disposition and the ability were there. As to my own observations year after year, as far back as 1924 I will say that I have had almost a monopoly. There has been no lack of glamour copy but I recall oftentimes no other reporter of so realistic, if cheerless, spirit as to observe that amid the confusion of quick growth and ever more dazzling splendor, the community was developing an underworld as vicious as that of any of the older cities.

The management of both these papers agree that the race track known as Tropical park, or the hoodlums' horse yard, is a political perquisite of an element of criminals from Chicago and New York. They know who those criminals are and admit they defile everything they touch and never have contributed anything to the decent benefit of any city in which they have visited or operated. They are just no damned good and their presence is a constant menace to the peace and morals of any place.

Criminal Scum Visits Miami Only to Relax

It has been said that the criminal scum of the north visit the Miami only to relax. But the criminal's only holiday is a busman's holiday. A low crime rate is meaningless in a town so crooked that even the children know which dives are privileged.

In olden times St. Paul and Toledo were king's towns in which crooks wanted elsewhere could sojourn and spend their stealings, immune from extradition, as long as they behaved themselves, but neither of the Miami papers would dare challenge local opinion by advocating such an arrangement there, and, anyway, it is well known that the criminals who go there find the local opportunities irresistible.

Frank Nitti, one of the most notorious gangsters in American history, is treated as a citizen and businessman, and the local prosecutor sees nothing awry in the fact that the brother-in-law of Al Capone and captain of the guard at Capone's fortified castle, is business agent of the waiters' and bartenders' union. When a few witnesses failed to confirm the obvious connection between Nitti's beer and highball water and Capone's remote control of the union he white-washed Capone's man.

But why should a witness risk his life telling all to that kind of prosecutor?

MovieLand Its People and Products

By Jimmie Fidler

Hollywood—Today, let's look at Ronald Colman. Behind his late- forties charm is one of the most self-contained, enigmatic personalities in show business. Less than a dozen people know him well—and that despite the fact he's been a filmville top-notch performer for more than 15 years.

Trying to pry personal information from him is like trying to extract the meat of an under-tipped huckster nut—aggravating and next to impossible. He was here for years before anyone knew for sure he was married—and he'd been divorced for months before the many ladies ready to throw themselves at his feet knew he was eligible. He's never hired a press agent, never solicited interviews. Neither has he courted the social spotlight. Hollywood hostesses, who once lay awake nights plotting means to get him on their guest lists, finally gave up in despair. When he married Vivien Leigh, several years ago, people predicted he would at last come out of his shell. Instead he built a home in Santa Barbara, 100 miles from Hollywood.

A misanthrope? No, on the contrary, Ronald Colman is probably the only star in pictures whose wife's really a contented man. He's run the $57 with which he arrived in America up to an independent fortune. He makes one or two pictures a year, no more, and spends the remainder of his time fishing, yachting, hunting—doing exactly what he pleases when he wants to do it. He has a few good friends—and wants no more. Examine that smile of his closely—it's the smile of a cynic, perhaps—but it's also the smile of a happy man.

MUTTERINGS: I'd like to French fry those stellar inconsiderates who trample audience toes while trying to escape from preview theaters five minutes before the final fade out. Ode to mayhem: "You certainly were ragged on that high note, Miss Moore." Young actors who resent tourist stares should remember—smart players have made them a stareway to stardom. Seasonal worry: Wouldn't it be awful if Vera Vague, beach lolling, turned up with a sunburn tongue? Horrible thought! Bob Burns leading an orchestra—composed entirely of bazookas. Secret ambition: To be Laurence Olivier's stand-in and rehearse balcony scenes with Vivien Leigh.

THE HOLLYWOOD PARADE: Ken Murray, dog lover; Mr. Murray's procaine philanthropies hit a new high recently when he salvaged 10 homeless pups from an S. P. C. A. Shelter—and presented them to guests as dinner-party favors. Wayne Morris, fine arts patron: The latest masterpiece in Mr. Morris' collection is a Mae Westian mermaid, painted on the bottom of his swimming pool. When the water is agitated, so is the mermaid—and so is Wayne! Director Anatol Litvak, hay-fever victim: Being

Shullsburg Recluse Leaves Big Estate

Darlington — (P)—The will of the late Wesley Wiley, Shullsburg recluse who left an estate estimated at $1,000,000, has been admitted to probate following settlement of a contest by two nieces. The nieces, Mrs. Margaret Albrecht, of Wauwatosa, and Mrs. Ann Travis, of Lake Geneva, who were left $1 each, brought a court action to break the will, which bequeathed the bulk of the estate to Wiley's second cousin, Miss Emma Houghton, of Amherst, Ill. The contest was dropped after counsel for Miss Houghton announced an out-of-court agreement had been reached, and county Judge O'Neil admitted the will to probate Saturday.

Most Leaders Have Trouble in Extending Saturday's Rally

buying mainly was in specialties today, most leaders encountering difficulties in extending Saturday's rally.

Aircrafts and steels stepped out in the forenoon. They found the going a bit rough and the majority eventually subsided. Early selling was absorbed fairly well, however.

was absorbed fairly well, however, and gains of fractions to more than a point predominated after mid-day. The pace slowed appreciably in the latter part of the proceedings and prices were no better than steady at the close. Transfers approximated 900,000 shares. Traders were unable to arrive at any definite conclusion regarding the shifting war currents in Europe, or just how this country may be affected, no matter which side wins. Consequently most showed an inclination to step carefully.

At that, business news was viewed as more constructive than otherwise, although a more-than-estimated

Touching new highs for the year—some eventually backed down—were Allied Mills, Celanese, Armour, Wilson and Co., International Paper Preferred, American Bosch and Bush Terminal.

Resistance was shown by United Aircraft, Curtiss-Wright, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, General Motors, Great Northern, American Car and Foundry, Radio Corp., Studebaker and Eastman Kodak.

A BIG ONE

New London—While larger catches have been rumored, this pike weighing 5 pounds, 7 ounces, which was hooked Friday morning by Mrs. Edward Hetzer, 501 E. Quincy street, was the largest reported among the three fishing contests sponsored at New London this week.

Mrs. Hetzer got this one on her first strike and broke her cane pole in landing the fish. Second best catch reported is one of 5 pounds, 5 1/2 ounces taken by Mrs. H. C. Mitchell. Limia catches are still the rule among the better fishermen. (Post-Crescent Photo)

94 Boats Counted in 9 Blocks as Anglers Swarm on Wolf River

New London—The walleye pike proved to be the big attraction in this Wolf river city Saturday and Sunday as hundreds out-of-town people swarmed in for a share of the good fishing, many bringing their own boats. At the height of the fishing Sunday morning, 94 boats were counted between the S. Pearl street bridge and Chicago and Northwestern Railway bridge, a distance of about nine blocks.

Traffic was congested all day along E. Wolf River avenue, particularly at Mill street. Many downtown people strolled the banks to take in the sight and enjoy the balmy spring weather.

The fish weren't striking as viciously as during the opening days but observers reported every boat had a good sized string alongside. Fishing generally was the best in the last half dozen years.

Group Meets With Railway Officials

Weyauwega—Some headway was made in a move for better passenger service on the Soo Line when about 40 representatives of interested communities met with five officials of the railway here Friday night.

The group which held an organization meeting at Marshfield a short time ago, seeks more modern coaches and faster service.

H. M. Lewis, Minneapolis, general passenger agent, acknowledged that the Ashland division could stand improving and suggested that the group file a formal petition. A committee will be named this week to further the request. George Dobbins, temporary chairman, and F. W. Bauer, temporary secretary, both of Weyauwega, were named to permanent terms last night.

It is said that the first steam boat to explore the Wolf river was the Black Hawk, which came up in 1843 but it was eight or nine years later before regular commercial steamers made scheduled trips. One of the first, if not the first was the Peggy, run by Captain Sherwood, which by 1852 was making tri-weekly trips from Oshkosh to Mukwa.
